How a Young Lawyer Vanquished a Famous Antagonist.

The attorney at the date of the story, was serving the commonwealth of Ohio and the county of Vinton in the capacity of prosecuting attorney at the little town of McArthur. He then bore rather a youthful and possibly somewhat verdant appearance for s man holding so respectable a position. The most conspicuous person known to the Vinton bar at that time was a grave and pompous barrister from a neighboring town-a man who had reached the middle age of life, and with an extensive_practice, profitable alike in fame and pecuniary gain; a man whose eloquence bent juries to his will, and whose logic pinned them fast: whose invective and pointed sarcasm blanched the cheek of the witness or the prisoner, as might be necessary to gain the case, and was alike dreaded and hated by his fellow practitioners. The attorney referred to is living yet, one of the most prominent jurists in southern Ohio His ability has not diminished, nor has his knowledge that he pos sesses ability. One day, the young prosecutor had a riot case to try, and, to his consternation, he learned that the gentleman re ferred to had been retained by the defense. The prosecutor handled the case with great care, but from the first did not hope to convict the prisoner. He was stirred up somewhat, however, by the sneering allusions made to him during the examination, by the imported counsel, and so, when he came to make his opening speech, he indulged a little in bombast himself. He expected to be torn up somewhat by the imported counsel, but was utterly unprepared for the simoon that swept through the court be sawed the air in front of the jurors; he shook his finger in the face of the young prosecutor and shivered in imaginary horror at the thought of so youthful a youth undertaking to measure swords with him. The voice was loud and bitter in its denunciations; the gesticulations were violent and demonstrative; the manner threatening and awe-inspiring, and with a face of scorn, he sat down with folded arms and awaited the verdict which he supposed they dare not refuse to render. The young prosecutor was mad. He felt he would like to thrash the imported counsel out of his boots. He arose to his feet, uncertain for a moment what to do. A happy thought struck him, and throwing his head back, he cast his left arm behind him and thrust his right arm in the breast of his vest, while under and twirl on his finger a martin- quite ready to help Lincoln. gale ring, which he had drawn torney appealed to the court for ed like magic. protection, while the judge laughed until the tears rolled down his sheeks and the jury and specta-

Shams in Jewlry.

The recent experiment of London lady of rank who wished to sell some jewelry goes to show that the shams are not newer than other things under the sun. Regarding what were supposed to be splendid rubies, the jeweller said: They are certainly very showy, madam, but unfortunately only clever imitations in glass." The lady, much chargrined, then called attention to the heavy setting, to which the jeweler replied, to anger than the average human. after the usual tests: "The setting is only gilt!" Another article produced for appraisement was a nental sovereign to the wife of a distinguished diplomatist. The skilful manufacture and specific gravity of the splendid object had been extrolled for generations in journals of the performance of a the family of the possessor, and so locomotive on the Great Northern highly was it prized that it was railroad, which recently carried the invariably sent to the bankers Duke of Edinburgh from Leeds whenever the family went out of to London, 1867 miles, in three town. The jeweller scrutinized it hours, or at the rate of sixty-two carefully and pronounced it to be miles per hour. This speed has extremely heavy; "but," he added, frequently been equaled and some-"if you will allow me, madam, to times surpassed for short distances. raise the very thin plate, I shall be The engine had driving wheels able to show you that the bracelet eight feet in diameter, or two feet is filled with-lead!" Yet it is larger than American engines. quite possible that the original purchaser of these articles believed them to be genuine, and paid for them as such. A few years ago an English gentleman took a bracelet to a leading provincial English jeweller to have the clasp mended. The jeweller looked at the stone carefully, and then said: "You are aware that this is not room when the imported counsel genuine!" "Not genuine!" exgot fairly under way. He paced claimed the gentleman, "you must be mistaken. This was given to my wife on her marriage by my uncle, the last man in the world to give sham jewelry." But the jeweller, an eminent man in his line, persisting, the donor was informed. He wrote back that it had cost him $500 and ordered that it at once be sent to him; and taking it to Messrs .- , a firm of the first eminence, indignantly stated his case. It was sham. They offered a check at once, or a new bracelet, and seemed terribly chargrined. Their explanation was, that, do what they would, they were at times the victim of their workmen, who substituted admirably made bogus gems for real ones. Probably scores of people have jewely thought to be real, which in truth is not so.

What strange similes people do make use of, to be sure! They say that a thing is as black as the ace of spades, when their comparison would be much stronger did they say as black as the ten of spades, which is ten times blacker than the ace. A man tells you that he has been working all day like a dog, when you know and he knows that a dog doesn't work at all. He tells you that the sky last eyening was as black as ink, leaving your mind in a state of ununcertainty whether the sky was blue or red, either of which it might have been according to his simile.
