A New Year.

GONE, gone forever! Like a rushing wave, another year has burst upon the shore of earthly being—but on referring to the date lines our readers will see for themselves that '82 has gone glimmering through the dreams of things that were, and '83 is the current Anno Domini.

The Exports of '82.

During the twelve months that ended last night, one hundred and thirty-six vessels cleared from the Columbia, bound to foreign ports; in 1881, one hundred and twenty-six vessels cleared; in 1880, sixty-three. This illustrates sufficiently the growth of our commerce. During '82 there cleared from the Columbia river, merchandise as follows: 597,632 cases of salmon, worth $3,112,593; 3,261,053 centals of wheat, worth $5,204,527; 509,314 barrels flour, worth $2,546,570; 20,735,000 feet of lumber, worth $259,187. The greater part of the wheat, flour and salmon went to foreign ports, principally Queenstown and Liverpool; the lumber was consigned to California, with two exceptions. The above constitute the principal items of exports. Besides there crossed the bar, outward bound, merchandise as follows: 191,362 centals oats; 7,321 centals apples; 1,573 centals butter; 4,091 centals potatoes; 52,803 centals wool; 11,419 centals hides; 2,973 centals tallow; 252 centals pickled beef and pork; fifty-six flasks or forty-two centals quicksilver; 1,162 centals hay; 8,263 centals dried fruit; 374 centals leather; 1,478 centals bacon and lard; 393 centals cornmeal; 14,063 centals hops; 17,832 centals bran; 174 centals cheese; 128 centals flax seed; 36,924 centals flax; 43 centals shorts; 497 centals fish; 50 centals rye.

We put each of the above items in "centals," as that is the most convenient unit to use in compiling such statistics as we present. The value of that miscellaneous assortment is $4,713,459.

This gives an aggregate of 309,173 tons that went out from the Columbia in '82, total value being $15,836,336. By way of contrast we state that the total value of Columbia river exports for '81 was $7,655,510; the great difference illustrates the increase in our commerce during the past twelve months.

We present the above in condensed form for two reasons; it saves our readers the trouble of wading through a mass of figures to get at results, and it is convenient for our congressmen to clip out and incorporate in their speeches when they are demonstrating the importance of Columbia river commerce, and the necessity of Columbia bar improvement.
