TRAVELING IN TEXAS.

We were nearing Atlanta. The train was on a down grade and going very fast indeed—perhaps half a mile a minute. I was sitting on my seat in the Pullman, with the table up in front of me and reading. At the other end of the car was a lady with some children, sitting with her back to me. Opposite her, but also with his back to me, was the conductor. Each "section" of a car has two windows. The one at my left elbow had the blind drawn down. The other had not. On a sudden at my ear, as it seemed, there was a report as of a rifle, the thick double glass in front of me flew into fragments all over me, and the woodwork fell in splinters upon my book. I instantly pulled up the blind of the other window to see who had "fired." But, of course, at the speed we were going there was no one in sight. I called to the conductor that some one had fired through the window. He had not heard the explosion, nor had the lady, and their surprise was considerable. And while I was looking in the woodwork for the bullet I expected to find, the conductor picked off the table a railway spike. Some wretch had thrown it at the passing train, and the great velocity at which we were traveling gave the missile all the deadly force of a bullet. "An inch or two more in the center of the window, sir, and you would have been killed, probably," said the brakeman. A look at the splintered woodwork and the bullet-like groove which the sharp-pointed abomination had cut for itself was sufficient to assure me that he was right. But think of the atrocious character of such mischief! The man who did it probably never thought of hurting any one. And yet he narrowly missed having a horrible crime on his head. "If we could have stopped the train and caught him we would have lynched him," said the conductor. "A year or two ago a miscreant threw a corn-cob into a window—very near this spot, too. It struck a lady, breaking her cheek bone and bursting the ball of her left eye. We stopped the train, caught the man and hanged him by the side of the track then and there."—Corr. N. Y. World.

Ingersoll and Christianity.

There is now no danger that Catholics will burn Protestants, or Protestants burn Catholics. Men have learned that fire is not an argument that appeals to the intellect. No church or sect now dreams of making converts with the fagots or rack. Against the Christianity of to-day what charge can Mr. Ingersoll bring, except that it asks assent to doctrines which he regards as untrue and preposterous? He surely cannot charge Christianity with spreading and fostering immorality. Catholicism does not teach them to commit adultery. Methodism does not encourage murder, and Presbyterianism does not promote theft and lying. The doctrine of incarnation may be foolishness in Mr. Ingersoll's eyes, but a belief in it cannot lead a man into looseness of life. The dogma of the Trinity may be an absurd fable, but it never taught a bank cashier to rob the safe. The persistency with which Christian ministers urge men to repent of their sins may be a mere waste of words, but it cannot, by the wisest efforts of sophistry, be viewed as an encouragement to crime. Bitterly as Mr. Ingersoll hates Christianity, he must admit that its influence is on the side of morality and decenty, and that any Christian community, however ridiculous may be its peculiar religious delusions, is higher in the scale of morality than any pagan community. Also it is an undeniable fact, that hundreds of thousands of Christians bear life and face the fear of death with a courage and hope which spring wholly from their religion. Mr. Ingersoll surely cannot claim that he is trying to abolish Christianity because it makes men worse and more hopeless than they would be without it.—N. Y. Times.

Developing a Boy's Brain.

A teacher had charge of a school in a country town early in her career, and among her scholars was a boy about 14 years old, who cared very little about study, and showed no interest apparently in anything connected with the school. Day after day he failed in his lessons, and detentions after school hours and notes to his widowed mother had no effect. One day the teacher had sent him to his seat, after a vain effort to get from him a correct answer to questions in grammar, and, feeling somewhat nettled, she watched his conduct. Having taken his seat, he pushed the book impatiently aside, and, spying a fly, caught it with a dexterous sweep of the hand, and then betook himself to a close inspection of the insect. For fifteen minutes or more the boy was thus occupied, heedless of surroundings, and the expression of his face told the teacher that it was more than idle curiosity that possessed his mind. A thought struck her, which she put into practice at the first opportunity that day. "Boys," said she, "what can you tell me about flies?" and calling some of the brightest by name, she asked them if they could tell her something of a fly's constitution and habits. They had very little to say about the insect. They often caught one, but only for sport, and did not think it worth while to study so common an insect. Finally she asked the dunce, who had silently, but with kindling eyes, listened to what his schoolmates hesitatingly said. He burst out with a description of the head, eyes, wings and feet of the little creature so full and enthusiastic that the teacher was astonished and the whole school struck with wonder. He told how it walked and how it ate, and many things which were entirely new to his teacher. So that when he had finished she said: "Thank you! You have given us a real lesson in natural history, and you have learned it all yourself." After the school closed that afternoon she had a long talk with the boy, and found that he was fond of going into the woods and meadows and collecting insects and watching birds, but that his mother thought he was wasting his time. The teacher, however, wisely encouraged him in this pursuit, and asked him to bring beetles and butterflies and caterpillars to school, and tell what he knew about them. The boy was delighted by this unexpected turn of affairs, and in a few days the listless dunce was the marked boy of that school. Books on natural history were procured for him and a world of wonder opened to his appreciative eyes. He read and studied and examined; he soon understood the necessity of knowing something of mathematics, geography and grammar for the successful carrying out of his favorite study, and he made rapid progress in his classes. In short, twenty years later he was eminent as a naturalist, and owed his success, as he never hesitated to acknowledge, to that discerning teacher.

The eldest son of Kate Class-Sprague drove a milk-cart from Canochet, last summer, to the principal hotels in town, and sold them milk. "This," says an exchange, "is the lad at whose birth the head of the house of Sprague gave his mother a half million dollars. Who would have predicted that seventeen years afterward he would be engaged in driving a milk-cart for a livelihood? At that time his mother was the envied of her sex—the most aristocratic woman on the continent. Now she is the subject for scandal; broken in fortune and in health. So goes the world. The wheel turns and turns. The man who is up to-day is down to-morrow. Our American aristocracy is short-lived. It starts from a wax-end to-day, flourishes in silks and satins to-morrow, and ends in a ditch the day after.

A San Francisco policeman who got nothing but curses for rescuing a would-be suicide from a watery grave, is said to have soliloquized: "If you are crazy the world won't miss you; if you are not crazy and want to put an end to yourself you are a fool not fit to live. I ought to throw you in again." Which he did, and the lamp of the once rescued man's life went out beneath the salty waters of the bay.

A friend furnishes us the following memorandum of the dimensions of the vessel in which Columbus discovered America: length of keel, 51 feet; depth of hold, 10 feet, 6 in; breadth of beam, 18 feet, 6 in; length over all, 63 feet. She had a main sail, mizzen and main topsail, and sprit sails, but no jibs.—P. S. Argus.

MOTHERS, READ.

GENTS—About nine years ago I had a child two years old and almost dead. The doctor I had attending her could not tell what ailed her. I asked him if he did not think it was worms. He said no. However, I thought I would try a course of medicine in my own mind that she had. I obtained a bottle of Dr. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE between four of my children, that was being so followed by a course of medicine. I gave her a teaspoonful in the morning and another at night, after which she passed several worms and was a new child. Since then I have never been without it in my family. The health of my children remained so good that I had to be careful watching their actions until about three weeks ago, when two of them presented the same sickly appearance that I had. I did nine years ago. So I thought I would try a course of medicine in my own mind. I gave them a bottle of Dr. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE between four of my children, that was being so followed by a course of medicine. Now comes the result: All of them are well and healthy. I have never been without it in my family.
