

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON. TUESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1883.

In a recent lecture on "Brain Health," Dr. J. Batty Tuke said that as a matter of fact, it was no easy thing to overtask the energies of the brain by work. It was not work, but worry, that killed the brain. But breakdown from overstrain did occasionally take place, and the first really important symptom was sleeplessness; when that set in there was cause for alarm. Loss of sleep was brought about thus: When the brain was being actively exercised, there was an increase of blood in its vessels—this was spoken of as "functional hyperaemia." If they continued the exercise of the brain powers too long, there was a tendency for the blood to remain in too great quantity for the cells becoming exhausted and not being able to control the vessels. In sleep the amount of blood was diminished, and sleep could not be procured if this functional hyperaemia persisted. In the absence of sleep, the cells could not recover themselves, and their activity became impaired. Headache, loss of appetite and general listlessness followed. As soon as a child or young person developed continuous headache, work should be discontinued at once.

In Australia and New Zealand 4,000,000 people have already 90,000,000 sheep, and have an area sufficient for the easy pasture of 200,000,000 sheep at the least. With one-twelfth of our population, they have twice our aggregate stock of sheep.

A strictly reliable rheumatic remedy is St. Jacobs Oil. It never disappoints.

37 Walker St., Baltimore, Dec. 1882. For six years I have been a great sufferer from Blood Disease, Dyspepsia, and Constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact, life had almost become a burden. Finally, when hope had almost left me, my husband seeing Brown's Iron Bitters advertised in the paper, induced me to give it a trial.
