His Burmese M jesty.

King Theebaw has been cele brating the birthday of his daughter. During the first year of their wedded life his favorite spouse presented him with a daughter, and his majesty, disgusted with the gift, forsook his wife and took up with several of her rivals. The Queen, however, coaxed him back, and as a pledge of reconciliation the fond husband caused the rivals to be strangled. In due time the Queen bore unto Theebaw another daughter. This was too much. The king went on a tremendous and protracted spree, wagering a wilderness of pea-green monkeys against a jungle of scarlet anacondas upon his ability to drink thirty gallons of gin-which is the Burmese equivalent ef our "rum"-in thirty consecutive days, during which period his loyal subjects waited with patient perturbation for further developments. At the end of this time the king came to what are regarded in Burmah as his senses, and immediately killed his mother-in-law. He followed up this proof of returning reason, however, by opening al the prisons in the country and turning the occupants loose. His act has complicated a situation which for one brief moment seemed comparatively clear, and Burmah is now in doubt as to whether the letting loose of the convicts or the strangling of her grandmother is to be regarded as the especial compliment the king meant to pay to his child.

Mr. Calvin M.Priest, of the New York Club stables, 15 and 17 E Twenty-eight street, New York, writes: Wo keep our stables con standly supplied with St. Jacobs Oil. In rheumatic affections, cuts, WINES, bruises, etc., ouccurring among borses, we have yet to find anything equal to the Great German Remedy.
