Driving Blind Fish.

A "black fish drive" is managed in this way: When a school is discovered feeding close in shore, a score or so of boats put out to intercept it. The boats are in two lines, one on each side of the school, and pull silently out until far in the rear, when they unite and advance on their prey. No fish is more timid than the grampus, as the fishermen well know, and they take advantage of this trait to effect his destruction. When several hundred yards away, the school discovers the boats and begins to show signs of alarm. Then the drive begins. The boats are urged forward, the crews splash the water, fire pistols, blow horns, wave their fishy-coats and yell like Comanches. The frightened fish rush shoreward—the only line of retreat—through the breakers, high and dry upon the beach. A few remain in the surf, and among these the men leap like madmen, shooting, thrusting with lances and pike, never ceasing until the last victim is slaughtered.

"It's excitin'," said a grim old whaler, "but it's kinder harrowin'" text. There's young uns among 'em that cries out like a human, and it goes agin' the grain to stick 'em."

Tales told of the booty taken in these drives seem incredible. Four hundred have been driven ashore at one time. The old whaler above quoted said that he went out one moonlight night and captured sixty-four. Another time in company with the Well-fleet fishermen, he drove 300 ashore at Billingsgate.—Boston Globe.

I might also add that the Great German Remedy, St. Jacobs Oil, has proved serviceable for animals as well as for man. It has done wonders—never disappointing, says Mr. S. H. Dimick, chemist, Ypsilanti, Mich.
