ASTORIA, OREGON:
TUESDAY, MARCH 27, 1883

How It affects Seattle.

THAT the case of Astoria is not an isolated one is illustrated by the following from the Post-Intelligencer:

Quite a discussion has lately arisen over the question of the Northern Pacific land grant, whether it should be longer continued or done away with. Our people are interested to a certain extent, and to that extent they should be heard, and due respect should be paid to what they say. The company's grant extends over almost every square mile in the counties of King and Yakima, and has so covered them a number of years. The company had not really earned an acre in either county, and yet holds millions within them more effectually than if patented by the United States. Their holding this land is a terrible blight upon both counties, which have been immensely injured thereby. The only semblance to a right to lands in King county is acquired by the building of a short railroad in Pierce county to some coal mines. That road is not of one iota of benefit to King county, while it is of great benefit to Pierce. It would not have been out of place, perhaps, to donate lands in Pierce county to aid the building of that road, but to give the lands of King county for the purpose is as bad as to compel the people of Walla Walla, Idaho or Oregon to aid with their money and property a local enterprise of this city. If the company went ahead with the road and built it through King and Yakima counties the objections to their possession of the land grant would probably cease. But they will not for several years. Further, they stand in the way of other companies who undoubtedly would build the Northern Pacific out of the way; companies, too, that would build without the grant of an acre of land, only too gladly. It is, even now, being published broadcast over the country that the company has recently headed off, or bought off the Oregon Short Line. If the Northern Pacific does not want a road here and will not build it, why stand in the way of others who do want and will build it? Under such circumstances it is illy becomes the company's friends hereabouts to advocate the retention of its grant in the two counties named. If we remember aright, president Villard himself when in this city a year and a half ago, said that he could not blame the people for trying to get the grant abolished, and further that the grant, great as it is, and backed by all the traffic to be obtained, was by no means a sufficient object to induce the company to build the road. In the one case as in the other, the road should be built or the grant forfeited.

Pointers.

CHICAGO thirsts more than it hungers, having about 5,000 places where liquor is sold, with and without license, and 2,800 stores for the supply of food.

A Philadelphia editor thinks the enemies of General Grant ought not to object to having him put on the 2-cent postage-stamp, as that is the only way ever contrived to get him licked.

Since the report came from Maine that a pot of beans had exploded, the life insurance agents of Boston have been as busy as bees writing policies. Even the Boston Post man has taken out a policy on his life for $17.50.

When Uniontown, a suburb of Washington D. C., was laid out, twenty-five years ago, the owner issued orders that no lot should ever be allowed to become the property of a negro. That man's own former home, in the centre of the town from which the colored race was to be excluded, is now owned and occupied by Frederick Douglass.

In a Nevada mining town, now deserted, which once had several thousand inhabitants, Indians are living in abandoned rows of good brick houses, which they have adapted to their tastes as far as possible by knocking out the doors and windows and punching holes in the roofs.

The first instance where physicians are mentioned in the Bible is II. Chronicles xvi. 12. It is not flattering to the faculty: "And Asa, in the thirty-ninth year of his reign, was diseased in his feet until the disease was exceedingly great; yet, in his disease, he sought not the Lord but the physicians. And Asa slept with his fathers."

For the first time in the history of the city, a Chicago paper says, the public schools were closed this year on Good Friday. Then followed a chapter of lamentations and the statement that "half of the children who attend public schools do not know what Good Friday is, and perhaps some of them could not learn by asking their parents." And they still take up collections in the churches of Chicago to aid the foreign missionary work.

TIMOTHY A. HOWE, postmaster general of the United States, died at his home in Kenosha, Wisconsin, on the 25th inst. He was born in Maine, February 24, 1816, and after receiving an academic education studied law and was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the legislature of Maine in 1845, and in the latter part of that year he removed to Wisconsin. He was elected to the United States senate as a union-republican in 1861, was re-elected to the senate in '67 and again in '73, during these eighteen years holding important committee positions and being one of the most prominent and influential members of that body. He was tendered by President Garfield an appointment as a member of the board of commissioners sent by the United States to represent this government in the international monetary congress at Paris, his associates being ex-Senator Thurman, of Ohio, Wm. Everts, of New York. He remained abroad six months. Soon after his return he began to be prominently mentioned as a possible member of President Arthur's cabinet. In 1881 he was tendered the postmastership, which he accepted, to the duties of which he has since devoted his attention. He strongly favored the reduction of postage made by the last congress and has been largely instrumental in securing improved mail facilities throughout the country.
