

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: SUNDAY, APRIL 15, 1883

No fresh vegetables for Sunday's dinner.

Oh, Captain Alexander, how could you go for to do so!

Talking about fire escapes; Heaven is concluded to be the best.

Astoria freight, consigned to Astoria is not put off at Astoria. Why! Let our merchants make a test case of it.

Capt. J. G. Hunter, secretary Astoria Iron Works, gives notice that there will be a meeting of the company on the 26th inst.

There will be no service in the German church to day, the pastor being unable to attend. He will be down next Sunday.

Henry Villard arrived on the Queen of the Pacific yesterday. He went up to Kalama. Our vegetables went up to Portland.

Robt. Hamilton, clerk school district No. 9, gives notice that there will be a school meeting in that district to-morrow evening.

The Capital Lumbering company of Salem have now in their boom about three million feet of logs, and one million feet more to bring down.

There is a painful rumor that the Jubilee singers are coming back. What has this patient and long-suffering community done that it should be thus afflicted!

The Home Dramatic association have two plays in rehearsal, and contemplate giving our citizens an opportunity to witness their production at an early day.

Chaplain Scott will preach in the Baptist church this morning and lecture in the evening. The evening subject will be "The victories of grace, illustrated in the life and death of Paul."

The steamer Gen. Miles, of the I. S. N. Co., will not make a trip to Tillamook till after her next trip to Gray's harbor on the 20th, there not being sufficient freight to justify it at present.

The Queen of the Pacific arrived in yesterday afternoon with fruit and vegetables for Astoria. The Queen of the Pacific started up to the interior yesterday afternoon with fruit and vegetables belonging to Astoria.

There will be a sociable at the house of Mrs. A. VanDusen on Tuesday evening next, April 17th, under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of Grace church. All the friends of the church are earnestly invited to be present.

A contract was let yesterday to Holt Bros., to build two store buildings 25x80 corner Chenamus and Genevieve street, adjoining A. Van Dusen & Co.'s. It will cost in the neighborhood of $3,000; lower floors already engaged.

Our enterprising neighbors of Waukiakum county, are about to build a little steamboat this season to enable them to come over to Astoria and bring their produce, with a little more speed than is allowed by present accommodations. It is a good idea, and we hope will prove successful.

The buildings of the Astoria Gas Light company are now in process of completion. The next two weeks will be occupied in placing all machinery in position and testing the same, and by May 1st, it is the intention of the company to begin furnishing light to Astoria and upper town. See adv.

A man advertises his timber claim in the Oregon Mist, for $50 an acre. It costs between $400 and $500 to secure one, and we know of no more profitable investment the way logs are selling at present. The trouble is to secure a good one, as everybody seems imbued with the same idea.

It is reported the Roman Catholics of Portland contemplate the sale of their Cathedral property on Third street, including the half block between Stark and Oak, the Bishops residence, and the partially completed brick tabernacle, in which case they will buy and build in the Western portion of the city.

The Wasco Sun is one of the few papers in Oregon that refuse to "croak the pregnant hinges of the knee that thrift may follow fawning." It comes right out with what it believes to be right and pleads the cause of the people. Its editor doesn't seem to be afraid of a cheap sneer or that pitiful cry of "demagoguery" that is nothing after all but the echo of a parrot.

The experiment of burning coal on the Wide West has been very successful, and fully demonstrated to be superior to wood. The West consumes about one ton an hour while running, or about fifteen tons on the pound trip between Astoria and Portland. The coal is procured from the Oregon Improvement company's coal bunkers at Albina, and is from one of the Seattle coal mines, and compares favorably with any imported coal for steamboat purposes.—News.

Arrival of Mr. Villard.

The Wide West started from Portland last Friday night and arrived down at half-past five yesterday morning. The tide was at its full, but no Queen of the Pacific had arrived. A heavy mist obscured the sea view, and a sudden clearing of the horizon showed nothing but the tapering masts of the bar-bound Lutterworth and Garnock. On the early arriving steamer were C. H. Prescott, manager of the N. P. R. R., J. M. Bockley, assistant manager; John Muir, superintendent of traffic; H. Thielson, chief engineer; R. Koehler, general manager, O. & C. R. R.; Paul Schultz, charge de affaires of the land department of the O. R. & N. Co.; J. S. Howard, general manager of the Oregon Improvement company, and other gentlemen who had come down to take a look at the only seaport Oregon possesses and welcome Mr. Villard. That gentleman not being on the morning tide which taken at the flood led on to Astoria, the party after breakfasting separated to stroll through the streets of our busy city and note the progress so evident on every hand.

The descending rain caused them to seek the seclusion that the cabin granted and when at four p. m., the Queen arrived, the docks were closed, the common herd not being admitted. Mr. Villard came ashore immediately upon arriving. He was neatly attired and looked as fresh and smiling as though he had not endured the discomforts of an ocean trip. He shook hands with the group that awaited his arrival, read several telegrams that awaited him and chatted animatedly with his companions. By this time the Wide West was decked with flags and streamers gay, and the distinguished party going aboard, the lines were cast off and the steamer headed for the flourishing city of Kalama, where Mr. Villard will take the train for the Sound.

Jumped Overboard.

Last Sunday a man named Patrick Lynch came down from Portland and the following day went up to Westport seeking employment at the mill. It was evident that he was not in a fit condition to work, but was given accommodations until such time as he could begin. He developed symptoms of mania a pota, and was closely watched and attended. On Thursday night the watchman of the mill who had left him sleeping a moment before while he went to tend the fire, heard a scream and saw him run to the end of the dock and disappear. All search was unavailing and the inevitable presumption is that the unfortunate man jumped overboard and was drowned. He was a native of Ayrshire, aged 35 years.

C. H. Bain has the agency of the Beauty organs and pianos. He says that these instruments do not require tuning.

Benorth & Johns make a suggestion this morning that seems to us to possess the elements of common sense. It is a wonder the idea has not been acted upon before.

Capt. Alexander is no doubt a gallant officer and a clever seaman, but he can never win the good graces of the ladies of Astoria if he refuses to leave fruits and vegetables.

In consequence of the sickness of his child the pastor of the Congregational church would inform the public that there will be no service in his church to-day, except Sunday school at the usual hour.

The Standard says that articles of incorporation of the Washington Co-operative Life Insurance company, of Portland have been filed in the county clerk's office. The purpose is to furnish life insurance to the family of friends of deceased members. Revenue is derived from yearly dues and assessments. The estimated value of the money and property of the association at this time is nothing. This is a little out of the ordinary rule, as in this day and especially this country of new corporations, the property and capital stock is from twenty-five thousand to five hundred thousand dollars. A company that admits that it has not got a cent in money and has no property of any kind, has as appearance of candor, and looks as if it intended to commence at the bottom and grow up with the country.

Died in Bellevue Hospital. Chaplain Stubbs has received the following letter from Rev. Dr. S. H. Hall of New York:

Charley Burchard, the poor "shag-haired" boy from Mishawka, Clatsop county, Or., has come to the end of his troubles. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, of the New York sailors' home were unremitting in their kindness to the poor fellow, rendering him every possible attention, and receiving in return his earnest expressions of gratitude. A little less than a fortnight since he was taken ill. The attending physician deemed it best that he should be taken to the Bellevue hospital for treatment. Pneumonia in its worst form ensued, and having no physical vigor to resist the disease, he died after a comparatively brief illness. He died March 25. On Tuesday following two of our missionaries went out to the hospital, held appropriate services, and then interred his remains in the society's lot for seamen, in Evergreen cemetery, on Long Island.

I enclose herewith a lock of his hair, which you may have some way of sending to his mother. The American Seamen's Friend society, of which Dr. S. H. Hall is the secretary, appropriated $30 to pay the bill and to defray the funeral expenses. This letter is printed for the special information of the relatives, to whom Chaplain Stubbs would write and forward the lock of hair if he had the address of the parents. The care and burial of this poor lad is another illustration of the benevolent spirit and labors of this, one of the oldest societies in the United States. No better or more important institutions than the American Seamen's Friend society can be remembered by those who are seeking for suitable charities to whom to leave bequests.—Oregonian 14.
