shuddering on Their Thrones.
 NEW YORK, April 27.—Prof. Mezaroff, of the dynamite school, has issued series "Number One" of his manifestos, advertising dynamite as a weapon entirely legitimate. He says: "We now inform ignorant and cowardly emissaries, tyrants in this country and Europe, that the advocates of dynamite are in a condition to take care of themselves, and in a short time Ireland and every other country will be freed from tyranny and czarism. Our case is exciting universal sympathy, and cannot be eried down by knaves in Europe. There are now over 400 schools, and ere long there will be 4,000, so that every trade society and every workingman's club shall be taught the science of explosives, and two-thirds of the soldiers of Europe be ready to strike with us, any day, in the cause of human liberty; and when we do so we shall make tyrants shudder on their thrones."

A Large Force.
 SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—In an interview this afternoon with Charles J. Crocker he stated that within the past two weeks the force at work on the California and Oregon railroad has been largely increased, so that at present it numbers close on 3,000 laborers. The work is principally directed towards reducing heavy grades north of Redding, and to the completion of a number of large tunnels. All available force formerly engaged on the Colorado extension has been moved to the line of the California and Oregon, with the exception of about 200 men, who would be transferred there in about two weeks. Material was sent forward some time previous, so that there is nothing to prevent the speedy completion of the road except natural difficulties existing on the proposed line.

Want to Sell out.
 NEW YORK, April 27.—Rumors have been afloat for several days that the Guion and Anchor steamship lines were both negotiating for the purchase of the Inman company's vessels, and its good will in the Liverpool trade. It was learned yesterday that the Inman line stockholders were anxious to get rid of their property, if they could do so to good advantage, owing to great losses which the company had sustained in the last four months.

These Did Not Love Life.
 The published accounts of 1,606 suicides contain queer stories. It will hardly be credited that a man would kill himself because his mule died, but a report from North Carolina, in October, says that "Caleb Hobbs committed suicide on account of the death of a mule to which he was attached. The mule died Friday and the owner wept over it until to-day, when he remarked that he could not live without his mule, and mixing a lot of whisky and laudanum, swallowed it. He was found dead." Another tale from Ohio is barely credible, as it relates that one Joseph Kuder, "on trial at the small village of Toutangany, for kissing the wife of a recently married man, committed suicide by taking arsenic." An Oregon youth, aged 19 years, loved his cousin and shot himself through the heart after inscribing on a visiting card the words: "My Fannie, no man has ever died for you." A small market gardener in Illinois hung himself because his corn was rotting in the ground. Another Illinois man shuffled off this mortal coil because he had lost his best boy and best cow, and didn't want to live any longer. A superstitious merchant in New York cut his throat because a customer sent him a letter asking him for the latest quotations in looking glass. An extravagant wife of a poor Colorado doctor swallowed arsenic because her lenient father, who had supplied her with money for many years, had resolved to draw the string of his money-bag closer, and not send her any more money, as he was desirous of her becoming more economical in her ways. A Missouri father was overcome with shame on learning that his son had stolen a watch, and ended his woe by a dose of poison.

 A New Jersey inventor devised a corn husker, which was a failure because it only worked satisfactorily upon large ears; therefore he suicided. A San Francisco hunchback left word behind him that blood rushed to his head, which seemed to be shrinking through his shoulders, and his bones were tangled one with the other rendering him wild with pain. The force of example is often remarkable; a St. Louis shoemaker shot himself because he lived within a block of a shoemaker who severed his jugular vein, and this deed preyed on his mind. A sailor tied a rope about his neck and leaped overboard. His body was towed into port before being discovered. A Vermont widow hung herself with a skein of yarn. A Virginian made four attempts to take his life and finally committed suicide by shooting himself through the head with a shot-gun. The muzzle of the weapon was placed against his right eye and discharged by a string fastened to the trigger and tied around a toe of the right foot. A Pennsylvania wheelwright used a hatchet, a knife and a rope. With the hatchet he struck himself three times on the back of the head, with the knife he severed his wind-pipe, but missed the jugular vein, and with the rope he strangled himself. An Illinois mechanic hung himself to a ladder in the bell tower of a church and was discovered by a frightened sexton. A Californian spread a blanket on the floor by the side of his bed, tied a small rope around his neck so as to draw through a loop, and tying the other end around the top of the bed post, less than two feet above the floor, and laid down with his right arm under his head, and strangled to death. An Iowa farmer cut his wrists with a plane, and afterwards hung himself to a fence five feet high. The distance was so short that in order to produce death he was obliged to draw his knees up even with his eyes and hold them there with his elbows. An old man of 80 years living in western New York, foretold the day of his death, and to fulfil his prediction cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor which he held in one hand, and which he had tied with a string so it could not move when doing the deed. A California powder maker made his exit with giant powder and was blown to shreds.

Political Puppy Promises.
 "If you want to see what disappointment is—real disappointment and plenty of it—let him come to Washington," said one of the disappointed men from a western state, as he sat himself down to wait until the mail should bring him some money to get back home with. He came on to see about an office and he got tired of waiting. Everybody was polite to him, but in an accidental way he discovered that his chances were neither immediate nor very certain. He said the promises "were too thick to realize on all of 'em." Then he laughed a bit of a chuckle, as though trouble didn't weigh very heavily upon him, and asked:
 "Did you ever hear about John Osborne and his setter pups?"
 On being informed that his listener had not only not heard of them, but was surprised that the man owned setter pups, he told the barkeeper he would take the same as before with a squirt of bittern in it, and began:
 "This abundance of promising reminds me of the story. John Osborne ran for sheriff in St. Paul, Minn., and while he was working all the boys with his good nature had frequent calls at his house, and whenever a man with a fancy for field sports came the talk always fell upon a beautiful setter and her fine puppies.

 "Nice puppies, John."
 "Yes, bully puppies, ain't they?"
 "They are the most beautiful setter pups I ever saw anywhere."
 "Then the candidate for sheriff would take the man aside, and in a confidential tone, tell him:
 "You just wait till after election and I'll give you one of those pups."
 "This thing had been going on for a couple of weeks, and one evening a man shut the door and left the house with a promise of a pup lingering in his ear, when Mrs. Osborne asked:
 "John, how many puppies are there?"
 "Five. Why?"
 "Well, I was thinking that tonight you had promised the twentieth third man that he should have one of them."
 "Oh, well, Mary," said Osborne, "don't you think he would be a mean man to run for sheriff who couldn't promise a pup to his friend?"—Washington Republican.

Hebo is a newly established postoffice on the Nestucca, some 20 miles from Tillamook bay, in the center of the county. The Nestucca has about 10 miles of tide water, with splendid soil on each side of the stream from the bay up some 20 miles. The bottom land is narrow, not more than three-quarters of a mile wide on an average, but the foothills are low, with numerous small streams running down from the main mountains, on which there is considerable good land, as good as there is in the state vacant. The country has no mills, although there is quite a demand for lumber, which has to be shipped from Yaquina by steamer. The timber is mostly dead from fires, but there is some fine yellow fir which is green near the river—enough to run a large mill for years—and good water power near at hand, immediately at the head of tide water. There is a small bay with nine feet of water at low tide.

Mr. Tim Gleason, ex-member of the Council from the Fourth Ward, Cincinnati, says he suffered terribly with rheumatism all last winter and spring. He tried all kinds of liniments and medicines without any benefit until he used St. Jacobs Oil, the first application of which insured a full night's repose, and its subsequent use entirely cured him. It is a great remedy, and the sufferer's hope.

MOTHERS, READ.
 GENTS—About nine years ago I had a child two years old and almost dead. The doctor had attended her but could not tell what ailed her. I asked him if he did not think it was worms. He said no. However, this did not satisfy me, as I felt convinced in my own mind that she had. I obtained a bottle of Dr. C. McLANE'S CILLARY VERMIFUGE (Worms). I gave her a teaspoonful in the morning and another at night after which she passed several worms and was a well child. Since then I have never been without it in my family. The health of my children remained so good that I had neglected watching their actions until about three weeks ago, when two of them presented the same sickly appearance that Fanny did nine years ago. So I thought it must be worms, and went to work at once with a bottle of DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE between four of my children, their ages being as follows: Alice, 8 years; Charley, 6 years; Emma, 3 years; John, 2 years. Now comes the result: Alice and Emma came out all right, but Charley passed forty-five and John about sixty worms. The result was so gratifying that I spent two days in showing the wonderful effect of your Vermifuge around Union, and now have the worms on exhibition in my store.
 Yours truly, JOHN PIPER.
 The genuine DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE is manufactured only by Fleming Bros., Pittsburg, Pa., and bears the signatures of C. McLane and Fleming Bros. It is never made in St. Louis or Wheeling.
 Be sure you get the genuine. Price, 25 cents a bottle.
