

The Daily Astorian. ASTORIA, OREGON: TUESDAY, MAY 15, 1883

Perturbed Portland.

VILLARD'S ultimatum concerning the bridge across the Willamette is in Portland commercial circles the one absorbing theme. With singular unanimity the journals assume an air of abstracted cheerfulness, and talk about possibilities concerning Fragments of Villard's utterances of '81 are brought to the surface; notably where he said to Portland men "you can build warehouses on the Sound." Like the melancholy bird in Poe's "Raven," their song doth one single burden bear—The Sound—The Sound. Even the erstwhile boast concerning Columbia City is no longer heard. The bridges, one near Kalama, the other at Portland are too much. The idea of looking within the borders of their own state and conceding the superior claims of Astoria never occurs. What, Astoria, forsooth! Perish the thought: rather ship up to Walla Walla, and trundle the grain across to the Sound that way, than follow the course nature pointed out and float the grain down to the sea to be loaded at a seaport for ocean shipment.

A Cheerless Life.

A WRITER in the Nineteenth Century thus sketches the present condition of the English laborer: We find ourselves face to face with the laborer on $5 a week. He has but one room for himself and his family of three or four children. By self-denial, by abstinence from drink, by daily toil, he and his wife are able to feed and clothe the children. Pleasure for him and for his impossible; he cannot afford to spend a sixpence on a visit to the park, nor a penny on a newspaper or a book. Holidays are out of the question, and he must see that he loves languish without fresh air, and sometimes without the doctor's care, though air and care be necessities of life. The future does not attract his gaze and give him restful hours in thought; he cannot think of a time when work will be done and he will be free to go and come and rest as he will. In the laborer's future there is only the grave and the workhouse. He hardly dares to think at all, for thought suggests that to morrow a change in trade or a master's whim may throw him out of work, and leave him unable to pay for rent or food. The laborer—and it is to be remembered that they form the largest class in the nation—have few thoughts of joy and little hope of rest; it is well with them, if in a day they can obtain ten hours of the dreariest labor, if they can return to a weatherproof room, if they can eat a meal in silence while the children sleep around, and then turn into bed to save coal and light—well, only because they are stolid and indifferent. Their lives slope into a darkness which is not "quieted by hope."

A Modern Damon.

EVERY one who has heard the beautiful story of Damon and Pythias. The following exemplifies the fact that the spirit lives in modern as well as ancient history: LEXINGTON, May 10.—Governor Blackburn to-day pardoned James Sizemore, who was sent to the penitentiary from Clay county in 1880 for six years on a charge of murder. Sizemore made no defense on his trial, his brother, a man with a large family, being the real criminal. Sizemore voluntarily took the odium and penalty on himself for the sake of his brother and his family. The brother dying the other day, confessed his guilt and gave unmistakable proof of the truth of his confession. The governor on learning the facts, at once issued a pardon to Sizemore.

The Ruby Hill, Nev., Mining News has entered upon its fourth volume. Speaking of the event the editor says: "The founder and first editor of this paper is in another world, his successor is in the Nevada insane asylum, and the third, and present unfortunate, is still battling with the world, the flesh and the devil, and dodging bullets and soliciting ads. with pretty good success." Good boy! The wife of Senator Jas. G. Fair of Nevada obtained a decree of divorce from her hubby last Friday. She and the children get $4,250,000, and the San Francisco residence, and "Slippery Jim" can now break all the commandments regardless of marital ties. Two men were frozen to death while making a trip on snow-shoes from John Day creek, on Salmon river, over the mountains into Florence, I. T., on May 2d.

In the case of the State vs. H. W. Abrams, for the murder of Dr. J. G. Brownlee at Junction on the 19th of last January, the prisoner was found guilty of murder in the second degree, and last Saturday was sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

Mrs. HANNAH O. GRANT, mother of ex-President Grant, died at the residence of her daughter Mrs. Mary Corbin, in Jersey City heights last Friday.
