

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:

FRIDAY, MAY 18, 1883

Regular business meeting of the Y. M. C. A. this evening.

The Columbia arrived in yesterday. The State sails to-day.

The Shubrick is coaled and ready for a trip as far south as Cape Arago.

E. C. Holden's auction sale will take place at 10:30 to-morrow morning.

The Frits, Argyleshire, Birker, Elisabeth and Lord Kinross have arrived out.

The I. O. G. T. will net over $100 as the result of their late dramatic entertainment.

The corner stone of the first Odd Fellow's Home on this coast was laid at Fairview yesterday.

The funeral of the late J. H. Winkler took place from Grace church at half-past two yesterday afternoon.

An alarm of fire on the corner of Main and Benton streets last evening called out the department. No damage.

Fears are entertained in regard to the safety of the C. S. Hulbert, which sailed from New York on the 2d of last November.

The Miles goes to the Cape this morning with tin for the Aberdeen Packing Co. She goes to Gray's Harbor next Tuesday.

In last Wednesday's session of the grand lodge, I. O. O. F., it was decided that the next session of that body be held in this city.

There will be a convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of the state held in Portland June 19 and 20, for the purpose of organizing a state body.

J. G. Charters has received the sad news that his father, J. Z. Charters, died on the 1st inst., at his home in Bradford, Pennsylvania, on the 68th anniversary of his birth.

Since the sawmills are obliged to pay for saw-logs cut on government lands by third parties, the question now arises are unearned railroad lands to be considered as government lands?

"How to live on seventy-five cents a week" is the latest work on domestic economy, but its author ought to know better than to send a newspaper office a circular announcing its value. It is unnecessary.

Yesterday morning Aaron Church who has been working at Marsh's logging camp was brought down to St. Mary's hospital by Ned Black. While at work Mr. Church cut his left foot badly, severing two toes and laying bare the tendon. The wound was bound up and last evening he was resting easy.

Jos. Hayes appeared before Justice Fox yesterday afternoon upon information filed charging him with murder. C. W. Fulton appeared for the defense; F. J. Taylor for the state. The prisoner was held without bail to await the action of the grand jury.

"Mr. Henry F. Knapp, C. E.," who has in two letters to the Oregonian effectually disposed of the Columbia river bar, now signs for other worlds to conquer, and offers $75 to be expended in the purchase of a gold medal to be given "to any person who will clear up the mystery about the origin of the solar system and the method of its maintenance." Hank is an enterprising cuss.

At the 1883 session of the grand lodge I. O. O. F., of this state which adjourned sine die last evening, it was decided that the term of office should remain one year as heretofore. I. W. Case, E. L. Bristow, and J. J. Murphy were appointed trustees. It was decided that a meeting to attend a funeral of a member was not a special meeting of the lodge, and that no record should be made of it unless so ordered by the by-laws.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning the Mississippi—or more properly speaking, what is left of her—slid off the sand beach where she had been towed by the Goliath, into much deeper water. Her stern now lies in at least ten fathoms, and at high tide at least seven-tenths of the entire wreck is submerged. It is probable she will lie there until she is blown up, as nothing short of an earthquake could start her again.—Seattle Chronicle 16th.

To our many friends who have assisted us by their presence, sympathy and kind offices in paying the last tribute of affection to our beloved brother we return our heartfelt thanks. DR. ASD MRS. JAY TUTTLE.

A Fish Story.

Dr. Charles C. Abbott, in a recent number of Science, tells the following story of some pike who had gone in search of minnows, but were cut off by a gill net. "The first pike was caught in the meshes of the net. Straightway the others stopped as suddenly as they had started, and recognizing their fellow in trouble, took in the situation at once. Each pike evidently realized the true condition of affairs, and reasoned thus: That pike tried to go through this obstacle in the water and is in trouble; it is necessary for me to avoid it by some means. There was five of these fish that paused close to the net, and each acted, I believe, as it thought best. One of them came to the surface, and, after a moment's pause, turned upon one side and leaped over the cork-line. Seeing the success of this effort on the part of one, a second did the same. A third came to the shore near where I stood, and, discovering a narrow space between the brail and the net, passed very slowly through, as though feeling its way. The others were either more timid or less cunning. They turned to go up stream, but being met by my companion, who was making a great noise by whipping the water, they rushed again towards the net, but checked their course when their noses touched the fatal net. Prompt action was necessary. They had not confidence in their leaping powers; and both, as though struck with the same thought at the same moment, sank suddenly to the bottom of the stream, and burrowed into the sand and beneath the lead-line, which was in full view. In a moment they reappeared on the other side of the net and were gone."

One Kind of "Journalism."

The following comes by way of San Francisco: "About three weeks ago an article appeared in the Polaris, charging C. H. Morris, chief engineer of the Oregon and California railroad, and some contractors, with crooked conduct in expenditures on the new construction work. An investigation shows that there was no foundation whatever for the article. The publishers say they were paid $500 to print the article and would not give the author's name unless paid a similar sum. Morris said he would rather throw the money into the river, but will spend twice that to discover the real author. The publishers will be arrested and brought before the grand jury on a charge of criminal libel and will doubtless be forced to disclose the guilty one. It is strongly suspected that a rich Roseburg merchant, who could not do things as he pleased along the line of construction, is the author of the slander. The right-of-way agent, Sol Abrahams, and others have been discharged from the railroad company, presumably on account of their connection with the libel."

Valuable Pet.

At Kalama a shrewd Englishman has a pet seal, which he always places in a box near the wharf so that passengers from Tacoma may see it, apparently suffering from close confinement, and longing for its home in the water. Yesterday a party of six good-natured commercial travelers, taking pity on the animal, bought it for $2.50, and when the boat started for Portland, threw it overboard, repaid for their outlay in the approval of their consciences. They had bought liberally for a dumb creature at the rate of 42 cents per capita. But before the boat had reached the middle of the river the seal had swam back to the dock, and was lying peacefully in the bosom of his master. When that sextette of drummers were informed by the captain that the Englishman practiced the little racket every day, that the seal was a pet, and that receipts averaged $4 a day, they asked the captain to take his boat back to Kalama so they could throw the man overboard.—Oregonian.

What's a Grocer?

"Uncle Jack," in the American Grocer, gives the following amusing and interesting answer to the above question: "I have heard numerous questions asked by all kinds of people, in and out of business, in reference to the above. What is he? How did he come to have this name given to him? or where did he get it from? and a host of others. These questions were usually addressed to a member of the trade, and he, as usual, failed to give any satisfactory answer. 'Is it possible that you are a grocer, and not able to tell me how you came to have such a name?' said a bright-eyed young lady, of some seventeen summers, in my hearing. 'Well,' she continued after a brief pause, 'tis really funny.' The member of the trade to whom this rather puzzling question was addressed considered himself a model grocer; yet, will all his knowledge of Oolong, Java, Rio, etc., he was unable to give the required information. Of course he tried to define a grocer, but the further he went with his explanation, the more perplexed and mixed he became, until the young and beautiful tautalizer laughed outright, and, with a blush of pity on her fair cheek, turned on her heel and whispered slowly: 'I'll call again in about a week, by which time you may be able to tell me why they call you a grocer.' The young man smiled, and gracefully bowed the young beauty out, being only too pleased with the idea that he had a week to hunt up the reason why he was called a grocer. I have no desire to see any of my readers in the plight I have described, and therefore I will briefly tell you all I know about it. The word grocer is derived from the old French word grocier, which word was originally derived from Latin, meaning one that sells only by the great, or utters his commodities wholesale. In olden times a grocer was known by the name of Spicer. Two kinds existed even at this age, those who sold wholesale were called grossers or engrassers, and the retail dealer, who is now a grocer, was then called a regrator. Thus it will be seen that none of these answer the question thoroughly, for a grosser would just as well apply to a dry goods merchant, or a dealer in any kinds of wares whatever. The term grocer appears to be of modern origin, and has been introduced through the object of describing a dealer in tea and sugar. This really was the reason why the modern word grocer came to be applied to the trade. Of course, since its first introduction, the trade has extended from tea and sugar to an almost endless variety of food products. The modern grocer, therefore, bears no greater resemblance to the old original id. than the electric light does to the old-fashioned "dip." This, my boys, is all I know, and it may be of interest to some of my new constituents."

PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir—My wife had suffered with "female weakness" for nearly three years. At times she could hardly move, she had such dragging pains. We often saw your "Favorite Prescription" advertised, but supposed like most patent medicines it did not amount to anything, but at last concluded to try a bottle which she did. It made her sick at first, but it began to show its effect in a marked improvement, and two bottles cured her. Yours, etc., A. J. HUYCK, Deposit, N. Y.
