Realizing the Situation.

The growth of Seattle in popuonstrate its statement. A few lation and in material wealth has years ago Grass Valley was one been phenomenally rapid during of the most prosperous towns in the past three years. There is no California. It got so prosperous reason to believe that the next three years will show a diminu. that the merchants got an idea Diamonds and Fine Jewelry, tion of growth. The construction that they could make money of the railroad to the Green river without advertising. When the coal fields will contribute largely local paper began to run to this result. But we remind our readers that the end of the term of three years will, if the vir. abroad that the town was on the tual promise of Mr. Villard to com- decline. San Francisco merchants N. P. R. At that time Seattle, and now the merchants are reap-Astoria, New Tacoma and Port- ing the fruit of their parsimony. land will be in a position to contest for the palm of superiority. We have named the above points nating the editor of the New York | realized. in the order which we think it most likely the fight will range itself. Seattle has all the natural press a fear that he is too good a advantages on her side. It be- man. And such it ninsula. will become. It is well to know who our real competitors are. Hence these allusions to our chief competitor in the great race for commercial superiority in the northwest. In the meantime it behooves Seattle to strengthen her outposts and prepare for large transactions and great adventures. It is necessary when the critical moment arrives to be prepared to show warehouses replete with goods sufficient to "job a bill" for the heaviest retailing house between Gray's harbor and the foot of the Rockies.

In instituting a comparison be tween our city and the chief city on the Sound, the Herald is just in its summing up-from the point of view that a Seattleite would naturally take,-but by the time three years have elapsed, our city will have so far progressed that no comparisons will be necessary to demonstrate Astoria's preeminence. By that time it is confi dently expected that a great por tion of the business of grain shipment that is now deflected out of its natural channel up a tributary stream will float in bulk to its proper shipping point; that the completion of the road from the heart of the great Willamette Vallev will pour the grain of that see tion into our docks and warehouses for deep draught vessels to load; that a line of coast road will traverse the fertile region to the south of us along the ocean shore; that the natural increase and unprecedented immigration will fill Clatsop, Columbia, Tillamook, Pacific, Chehalis and Washington counties -an empire in themselveswith people, who, attracted by the great advantages this country possesses, will make their homes here. and help to build up the great commercial city of Astoria. This much may be said without any semblance of dealing in flights of fancy. The Herald gives its readers some excellent advice; our own merchants will do well to not grow weary in well-doing, but congrow weary in well-doing, but continue their present effort to gain and hold the trade of every community that is within their reach. It is only in this way that commercial supremacy can be at-

THE Boston Journal says that no nation has ever established a system of manufactures without a protective policy. It adds: "No nation has been enabled to hold its own industrially against richer and more advanced neighbors without the sheltering influence of protection. The nation which today is presenting the greatest opposition to the theory of protection and is the most strenuous advocate of free trade, was for a century under the most positive protective measures ever known. It scarcely need be added that this nation is Great Britain, or particularly England."

SINCE the Czar's coronation the telegrams regarding Nihilistic movements in Russia are scarcer. "There's the pause that makes calamity of so long life."
