

The Daily Astorian. ASTORIA, OREGON: SUNDAY, JUNE 3, 1883. The Coming American.

The gradual change of the American Anglo-Saxon into a type resembling that of the Iroquois and Cherokees and other Indian tribes, has been observed by a host of writers; and among the agricultural population of the west, any European traveler might be startled to meet with stalwart, eagle-faced men of pure white blood, but so strangely resembling Indians in face and form that they could readily pass for half-breeds.

That the Americans are becoming an eagle-visaged people the N. O. Times considers certain, and that many Indian physical characteristics are being developed among the original American population is indubitable.

Pointers. The crowned heads of Russia, Austria, Italy and Germany are to meet at Berlin in the autumn. It is said that twenty Chinamen have been killed on the California and Oregon road since the beginning of its construction.

A western paper has started the discussion when men should marry. The general idea of the proper time is when they get the girl's consent and the money to pay the minister.

The Minnesota wheat crop used to be 68 per cent of the whole agricultural yield of the state. In 1883 it will be only 47 per cent. The people are diversifying crops so as to divide the risks.

The London Daily News learns that a hundred members of the house of commons have signed the letter to the prime minister in favor of extending the country franchise to women who possess the necessary qualifications.

ing depot of the Pacific coast, it is only a question of time when the major part of this product will be brought from the west to the east. Mr. Habishaw thinks that in a few years the manufacturing of the oil will be carried on in San Francisco instead of New Bedford.

When Dean Richmond was President of the New York Central Railroad, his son Henry, recently appointed a member of the New York Civil Service Commission, was a conductor on the road. The elder Richmond was on his son's train, and making no move to show a ticket or a pass, was plumply asked by the boy for a ticket. "Go away, I haven't got any," said he. "But," said the conductor, "my orders are strict to let nobody ride without a ticket or a pass."

The best newspapers in the world town the public as their masters. The man does not live who has had any experience and would dream of building up a newspaper and making it pay expenses, without some regard for public opinion.
