A Mistaken Idea.

A GLARING instance of misconception of the truth is afforded by the recitation of an eastern labor convention, which in an earnest but totally misguided effort to secure the "freedom of labor," framed a platform of which this is the most prominent plank:

"We demand of congress an act making it a penal offense to import foreign labor under contract for the purpose of reducing the wages of American labor."

They also demand "that transportation and telegraph charges shall be based on actual cost, after allowing a fair profit." Further on they insist that there "shall be equal pay for equal work for both sexes," and also declare that "education must be made compulsory."

All these resolutions look directly to the increased interference of government in private affairs. If transportation and telegraph charges are to be based on actual cost, that actual cost must be determined and the charges must be regulated by government. If education is to be made compulsory, it is the agents of government who must apply the compulsion. If equal pay is to be the rule for both sexes when they perform equal work, government officers must ascertain the facts and administer the remedy. If the introduction of foreign workmen is to be controlled, and if, under certain circumstances, it is to be punished, the control and the punishment must likewise be entrusted to the government. In a word, what these laboring men demand is that the hand of the government shall be made heavy; that its oversight of private affairs shall be intensified; and that, instead of less government and more liberty, we shall have more government and less liberty.

This doctrine is the very reverse of all the political truths and principles through whose development this republic has grown up; and this anti-American tendency, this tendency to despotic measures and despotic remedies, this distrust of freedom, this opposition to the methods of liberty, which pervades that platform is the idea and outgrowth of foreigners, of men who have not been in this country long enough to understand our American system, of men who were reared under conditions which our republican democracy renders impossible to exist. It smacks too much of the "paternal form of government," the government of France and Germany which does all the thinking for the individual and turns the citizen into an automatic machine. It is anti-American and should be condemned.

"An old blatherskite" is the cruel, contemptuous term that the Oregonian applies to Gen. Ben. F. Butler, Democratic governor of Republican Massachusetts.
