ASTORIA, OREGON:

SUNDAY.....JUNE 10, 1883

A Poor Plan.

COMPLAINTS against railroad corporations are constantly made in the United States, yet all the evils that may arise from the existeuce of such corporations are very far less than those which must proceed from the system of railroad building adopted in Australia. "The governments of the different provinces," says an exchange, "are building their own lines. There are no private railroads at all. The lines that have been built pay the interest on the money borrowed to construct them. Several new roads are being projected. There is, therefore, cheap transportation in Australia, because the dividends of stockholders are eliminated from the problem."

This mode of constructing and conducting public works may possibly do for Australia while the provinces or states between which the country is divided, are limited in population and in resources, but it will not work well in a great and populous nation where the people esteem the maintenance of political freedom as a primary necessity. Under any situation, there are too many government officers, and the power of government is overshadowing; but if railroads and other enterprises of the kind are to be owned and controlled by the government and managed by government agents, that power will become irresistible, and the political party that once possesses it can never be turned out short of a violent revolution.

All the grounds of dissatisfaction that may arise from the management of private railway corporations are as nothing compared with the deadly mischiefs that must proceed from a system of paternal and omnipotent government.

Moreover, cheapness of transportation is much more probable where there are many competing railroads than when all the roads are owned and run by the govment, without any competition at all.

The New Tariff Law.

THE treasury department has decided a troublesome question with reference to the new tariff law. The question involves the transition from the old law to the new, and the settlement definitely as what goods upon July 1 are subject to the new tariff. The law provides "that all imported goods, wares and merchandise which may be in the public stores or bonded warehouses on the day and year when this act shall go into effect shall be subjected to no other duty upon the entry thereof than if the same were imported respectively after that day." The new law goes into effect at a certain hour inevitably, therefore when the hands of the clock shall divide the old law from the new cargoes of merchandise at the great ports of entry will be half on the ships and half on the dock, or perhaps will be scattered clear from the hold of the vessel which brought it over to the bonded warehouses. The question raised was how should the goods in transit at this moment be regarded with reference to the rate of duty; should only goods which had actually reached the bonded warehouse be made to pay according to the new tariff? or should merchandise simply landed on the dock be treated as having entered the warehouses? Should they go a step further, and apply the same rule to such merchandise as still remains on board the vessels, or such as might indeed be on the way across the ocean? These questions have proved very troublesone to the department, but it was necessary they should be decided before the law went into effect. The ruling has accordingly been made, that all goods which have been entered prior to July 1, whether they have actually reached the bonded warehouse or not, will be treated as though they actually were in the public stores or bonded warehouses on that day. No matter where the goods may be, whether on the dock or in the hold of the vessels, if they have been imported according to the records of the custom house, the new duty will be charged the same as though they had actually crossed the threshold of the bonded warehouse. This ruling will be satisfactory to more importers, it is believed, than would have been the case had the decision made the new duty applicable only to such goods as were actually in bond, as provided literally in the act. This is because that upon most of the imports the new tariff will be lower than the present rates. There are many things, however, upon which the new duty will be higher than that now assessed, and it is expected at the department that importers of such goods will demur to the ruling and carry the matter to the courts. In any event, therefore, there will be lawsuits at the very first in the application of the new law, and not improbably the very constitutionality of the act will be assailed.

A WISCONSIN court had decided in favor of a woman who had applied for a divorce, but the formal decree was likely to be delayed until the next day. Her lawyer protested, and being compelled to give reason for the hurry, he explained that his client's betrothed second husband was in the room, and that the couple wished to go at once to a minister for marriage. The judge ordered the decree to be made out forthwith.

THE senate has passed a bill incorporating the Cape Cod ship canal company, with a capital of $5,000,000. The company is required to deposit $200,000 with the state as a guarantee of good faith.

THE government signal station at Point Barrow on the Arctic ocean is to be abandoned. The northernmost station will then be one to be maintained at St. Michael's.
