The Season of '83.

NEARLY three-fourths of the time during which it is lawful to miles, being nearly one-half of catch salmon in the Columbia, has elapsed, and it is now in order to give a few figures in relation to decided that a married woman canthe present status of the matter, not enter into copartnership with Never since the first can of Col- her husband or any other person umbia salmon was packed, has for the purpose of carrying on a the situation been so complicated partnership business. as at the present time, and at no Six thousand baby alligators are period has it been more difficult sold in Florida every year, and to give facts from which any prob- the amount of ivory, number of able deduction could be made. At skins and quantity of oil obtained the beginning of the season the from the older members of the canners found themselves con- saurian family are sufficient to enprice of raw material; they had already been cognizant of the high price of tin, twine and all the rest of the necessary plant; they also knew that every neighboring ereck and inlet was having a cannery crected thereon; that from San Francisco to Alaska wherever a salmon would probably show his fronted with a new factor in the title them to a high place among head a net would probably be found to run it into, and when the price of the raw material went to seventy-five cents, ninety cents, and in one instance one dollar a fish, the query rose, "Is it worth while to start?" The general conclusion was that of two evils, the lesser would be to begin operations. The quality of Columbis river salmon is confessedly unequaled in the world: it is sought after and deservedly commands the highest price in English or American markets. Hence it was argued, and rightly too, that the little to embarass or weaken, and sale was assured and the season began. At that time the supposition was that there would be a year. If all the leaders of the light pack. Last season there party had interpreted and heeded were 543,000 cases of salmon packed on the river; few antici- faithfully as the president has ipated that this season's pack tried to do, the outlook for the would reach 400,000 cases. Up to thirty days ago the pack was fully thirty per cent below the corres ponding period of the previous season and appearances were that At Liberty Hall there would be a "short pack." Perhaps for a variety of reasons it would be as well if this season's Strawberry and Ice Cream Columbia river salmon pack were one. Since the first of materially increased. The presumption is that the pack will at least equal last year's figures. Of O'THE NIGHT OF JUNE 19TH, ABOUT that nothing can be more than presumed. Another anomalous feature of the season is the differ ence between buyers and sellers. There is no salmon going on storage, and the amount actually sold is far below the sales of former years. The best sale we have heard of this season is 8,000 cases for the English market at $1.35,
