

The Daily Astorian. ASTORIA, OREGON.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1883

The Way to the Ocean.

The American with his merchandise arrives at the sea shore and can go no farther. On the west the Pacific spreads its vast expanse before him.

It is admitted says the Maritime Register, that the American, by being shut off from the rest of the world unless the foreigner helps him, is in a most unfortunate position.

"The coronation of the czar," remarks the Spectator, "was Asiatic in more than its accessories. If we were asked to state in a word the 'note' or central fact which differentiates Asia from Europe, we should answer 'Immoderateness.'"

Labor and Food.

The human body never ceases to work. Even in most profound slumber some of the functions of life are going on, as, for instance, breathing, the circulation of the blood, digestion, when there is food in the stomach; and it follows that some part of the nervous system is therefore awake and attending to business all the day and night long.

ONE of the results of a lawsuit recently tried in California is to give definiteness to the phrase "a right smart chance." A witness testified that he saw a right smart chance of hogs invading the plaintiff's field.

THE Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal reports General Grant as saying in that city: "I am in favor of wiping out the internal revenue system and making the burden of taxation fall upon the imported articles. The states themselves should have charge of the liquor and tobacco tax and do what they please with it."
