

The Daily Astorian

ASTORIA, OREGON:

FRIDAY, JULY 22, 1888

The State of California left out yesterday afternoon. The Ullock cleared yesterday. She has a cargo valued at $171,923. Chelalis is to have a newspaper with the evanescent name of Borealis. A surveying party is locating the line of the Chelalis railroad to Gray's harbor. Judge Bennett passed through the city yesterday on his way to San Francisco. There were ten fire alarms in Portland on the 4th; fortunately no damage resulted. Piles were being driven east of the Pythian Hall yesterday, for a building to be erected by I. W. Case. The canneries of the Northwest Coast are reported doing very little, and the catch is much smaller than usual. The Weekly Astorian, with a complete account of the fire is out this morning. Extra copies can be had at this office. L. Morgenstern, the advance agent of Janansek, thinks the great actress can reappear in Astoria about the 25th inst. The steamers Costa Rica and China have been sold by the Pacific Mail Company to the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company. The stockholders of the Astoria & W. R. R. Co., adjourned their meeting yesterday afternoon to meet on Monday, July 24th, at 2 p. m. At the quarterly examination of teachers held at the county superintendent's office June 29th and 30th, the Misses Katie and Emma Connolly of San Francisco, Cal., received first-grade certificates. Portland's celebration of the Fourth was in every way a success. The parade, oration, etc., went off in good style, and in the evening fireworks and a banquet rounded out in splendid style the festivities of the day. The county court met yesterday and after granting two liquor licenses for Seaside precinct and appointing viewers for a road from Church's wharf to the south line of township 8 N., 8 W., adjourned to the 10th inst., at one p. m. There is always a fresh stock of worries arriving just about the time the old consignment is about used up; the latest bit of pleasant news is that the cholera is coming to this coast. The cholera is one of those nuisances that you can't notify to leave town. Dan Ingalls, of Chadwell, says that on the evening of the fire he distinctly heard the engines; his house is thirteen miles from Astoria. His neighbor, Anderson, who lives a mile farther up the stream also heard the puffing and surmised that there was a great fire. Oliver H. Cole is down here to adjust the losses of the fire of the 23rd inst. He represents the following companies: Liverpool, London & Globe; North British & Mercantile, London & Lancashire; Hartford Fire; Commercial Fire; State Investment; Lion Fire; German American. He makes his headquarters at A. Van Dusen's agency where parties interested can interview him. Harry Boyd, representing Hamburg & Bremen, North German; Prussian National, and Providence Washington, is also in the city. These gentlemen represent companies that had risks aggregating $32,000. By general orders each post commander in the Department of the Columbia will ascertain by a competitive trial, on or before September 1st, the most suitable markmen of each company, troop or battery, and one from each non-commissioned staff or band, at his post, and report their names to Department Headquarters, with the scores made during the contest and on the four previous practice days. The marksmen thus reported will be ordered by their respective post commanders to Vancouver Barracks, to arrive there on or before September 6, for practice and to compete on September 15, 17 and 18, for the honor of places in the Department team of twelve, and for the prize awarded by the War Department. The London Grocers' Gazette says: For salmon the demand is not brisk, but it is generally admitted that the present favorable weather must improve the consumption and thus lead to better trade later on. The California Grocer and Canner comments upon what it terms a systematic puffing of Fraser river fish by the English trade papers. The facts are that during the past season English markets have been supplied with salmon from the Skeena and Nass and other rivers to an unprecedented extent. Amongst these, several brands show a marked improvement on the usual Fraser river quality; and, although they are certainly inferior to the best brands of Columbia river, their presence here has materially affected trade in the latter.

The Fourth in Astoria

About the first salute on the morning of the Fourth was the tapping of the fire bell at half past two A. M., summoning the committee of safety according to the signal agreed upon. The trouble was the refusal of the proprietors of the new corner saloon to comply with the provision closing all places of business at ten P. M. A party of special police made a descent on the place and after a lively interchange of pistol shots in which one man was wounded in the leg, Reilly, Ginder and one other man, together with a woman of belligerent disposition were captured and placed in jail. By early dawn everyone was "up and dressed." A meeting of the committee of safety was held at which it was decided to notify certain parties to leave town. Printed notices were soon furnished the committee, each reading: "Astoria, July 4th, 1883. To —, you are hereby notified to leave Astoria, within 24 hours, not to return. Signed Citizen's Committee." As the day wore on, the city presented a singular appearance. The streets were crowded; ladies in their best array, and a large crowd of visitors from the vicinity, filled the streets, which were bright with banners and decorations. But there was no attempt to celebrate. Everyone seemed as though expecting something, they hardly knew what. At the slightest unusual sound there was a general alertness, and as the day went by and evening came on there was a universal sense of relief that the day was over. With praiseworthy prudence all refrained from any setting off of firecrackers or other combustibles, thereby lessening the danger of accidents. It was a singular day, such a Fourth of July as we have never to see in Astoria again. In passing along the street one could hear whatever he wanted to. One man had been caught doing this thing, another man had been captured doing something else; the air was full of rumors. All day the special police were bringing in men to the city jail. At sundown, eight of the inmates were marched up to the county jail leaving sixteen there. Shortly after nine o'clock some of the committee of safety visited vagrant haunts warning parties who had not been previously notified that a due regard for their health suggested instant departure. Few citizens slept last Wednesday night, and had there been any effort on the part of the brutes in human form who added to the horrors of Monday's fire to make further opportunity for plunder they would have been summarily dealt with. On the morning boat yesterday went several who had been notified. In the stream, the vessels were gaily decorated, and all the steamers displayed a liberal supply of bunting. The only celebration was the Knights ball which was well attended. Everyone seemed glad of a chance to rest, broiled flesh, braised muscles, sprained limbs and countless aches needed attention, and altogether the 4th of July 1883 in Astoria does not present a very brilliant picture to hang upon the walls of Memory's picture gallery.

Drowned. Two men, one named Fred Anderson owner of a fishing boat and his boat puller named Pete —, were drowned opposite P. J. McGowan's place, Wednesday evening. The boat and net were found in Mr. McGowan's fish trap Thursday morning. It is supposed that they were lying at anchor and were caught by some drift and upset; the boat was somewhat injured. The bodies of the men were found in the trap and brought to this city yesterday morning. The funeral will take place from the Weston Hotel at two o'clock this afternoon.

Circus Coming. To-morrow Sherman & Hinman's great European circus will appear at Astoria. The troupe is enlarged and reorganized and elicits the most flattering encomiums from the press. The trick horses are a show in themselves and the aggregation of talent that will exhibit is something more than ordinary. An innovation which the ladies will appreciate is the fashion of providing chairs with a rack for the feet and a support for the back, so that a comfortable seat is assured.

Notes of the Fire

Over 6,000 people visited the scene of Monday's fire on the two subsequent days. Families in the vicinity who had packed up were busy moving back again, and whatever of value the owners of the burned property could get was being removed. A notice signed by the citizen's committee was put around yesterday, ordering all persons having property other than their own in their possession to leave the same at police headquarters for identification. This will give any one an opportunity to return whatever they may have that does not come under their ownership, and avoid any trouble about it. D. P. Thompson came down from up river yesterday. He started on a tour of investigation, and found things not as bad as they might be. The worst of it is that in answer to a dispatch to San Francisco duplicating his order for iron pipe, the San Francisco firm answered that there wasn't a mile of pipe procurable in the city. This necessitates sending to Philadelphia for the pipe, involving a long delay and throwing the construction of the works back. Mr. Thompson says whatever men and money can do will be done to push the work to satisfactory completion. He had everything arranged to finish his work at Bear creek on the 15th and begin laying mains here eastward, but this disaster puts a quietus on that program for the present. He had about nine miles of iron pipe on the O. R. & N. dock. Of this about two miles is still on the dock, the ends warped, the heads bruised and the asphaltum burned off. The other seven miles is at the bottom of the bay. It will be fished out as soon as possible, but the chances are it is in bad condition. Though the losses are severe, in some instances sweeping away everything in the world the losers possessed, yet there isn't a single whimper. Everyone we questioned yesterday said, "Yes, I'll build as soon as I can." Not one said he or she was going to give up. Indeed the chief regret seemed to be that the lack of facilities for sawing lumber will entail delay in getting out material. Ford & Stokes hung out their banner yesterday in Home's new building and were busy waiting on customers; Jo Charters is established next to Elberson's bakery and is ready for business, Frank Fabre was busy selling ice cream from a hand cart on the Fourth and will make his famous coffee as soon as he can find a place. Win. McCormick is in the express business temporarily; A. G. Spexarth is going into Flavel's new building; Ike Foster, Luigi Serra, Aug. Danielson, and others will get into active operation again as soon as possible. F. B. Elberson has a few hats that were carried into his place when some of the department sent for their fire hats Monday evening; maybe you'll find your hat there. A. G. Spexarth says that if the gentleman who took his twelve volumes of Appleton's Encyclopedia will kindly return them he will feel greatly obliged. His name is stamped upon the leaves thereof and he needs the work for reference. A Webster's Unabridged would also be hailed with joy by the same owner. The sawmill will not be rebuilt on its former site. The company will dispose of the logs as soon as possible, and may put in a portable mill to saw sufficient lumber to build a new mill. Nothing definite, however, can be said as to the time and place of rebuilding. The insurance on the burned property was not twenty per cent of the value. The adjusters begin work this morning.

A Trunk Mystery. The expressman carefully deposited a new trunk in the hall, Mr. T. with a knowing smile, remarked to his surprised family: "This is the mysterious trunk I told you about," and commenced to unlock it, his wife and children drew back, expecting something wrong to come forth. But their scare came to a certain end as he pulled out a new suit for his boy Jim, 2 fine colored shirts, 1 tie and a bundle of socks for Charley, a pair of white handkerchiefs for the new bed room, 2 pair fine garters for the boys, an elegant suit for himself, and then turned the trunk over to June to pack her things in. The whole mystery was thus brought to a close, and the trunk was put in the hall. The Boss Merchant Tailor and Clothier. He will solve the same mystery for all who call on him.
