

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1888

The Ocean Grove camp meeting begins next Tuesday.

The Shubrick was at Cape Fear-weather last Monday.

J. M. Alley has been appointed postmaster at Nehalem.

The Kate F. Troop is discharging ballast at Flavel's wharf.

F. T. Jordan is a passenger on the outgoing steamer to-day.

Wm. H. Watkins has been elected Portland's chief of police.

Alfred Anderson will be hanged in Portland at one o'clock to-day.

The Queen arrived in at 10:30 yesterday morning. The Columbia sails to-day.

T. S. Jewett, auditor and clerk, returned yesterday from a six week's jaunt in eastern Oregon.

Rev. J. F. Ellis has been elected to the presidency of the Pacific University at Forest Grove.

Mrs. Dr. Adams who has been here on a five weeks visit leaves for San Francisco on to-day's steamer.

C. W. Fulton, city attorney will occupy rooms 5 and 6 in the Odd Fellows' building, after the 1st prox.

C. J. Curtis, a Portland addition to the legal fraternity, has leased a suite of rooms in the Odd Fellows' building.

In the police court yesterday Frank Corvillen, drunk; fined $10. James Calvin, disorderly; fined $100. China Mary, violation ordinance 72; forfeited $50.

E. C. Holden calls attention to that trite quotation from the immortal bard concerning the tide of fortune, and makes sundry comments thereon which are worthy of observation.

Dinnie, "the champion athlete of the world," who was recently beaten in two San Francisco matches by Muldoon, is desirous of visiting this section of country and showing his muscle.

It may be all right to bring babies to the theater who paw the air and vociferously proclaim to the attendant maternal relative their belief that it is a long time between drinks, but it sadly upsets the performers and the audience, all the same.

The Oceano Steamship company's new steamer Mariposa, arrived at San Francisco last Sunday, 57 days 2 hours from Philadelphia, via Rio de Janeiro and Valparaiso, her total running time being 47 days 12 hours. Her time from Philadelphia is the best on record.

The just and the unjust at Chilliwack, B. C., are in trouble. In a Chilliwack church last Sunday a prayer for rain was read. To this prayer those parishioners whose hay had just been cut raised an objection and offered counter prayers for dry weather. Thus far the dry prayer has prevailed.

Writing from British Columbia to Forest and Stream, J. C. Hughes says: "Pigs upon the clear-water rivers learn to dive after the salmon lying dead on the bottom of the streams and the interesting sight may be witnessed of a sow diving for a salmon, and, having obtained it, taking it ashore for her little ones."

On yesterday's boat John Williamson, Jr., was taken to the insane asylum, having been adjudged insane by a board of medical examiners. He is only twenty-one years of age; and showed symptoms of insanity a short time ago. On Wednesday he was exceedingly violent, requiring personal restraint to keep him from injuring himself.

Loss of the Sheet Anchor. The old brig Sheet Anchor, so familiar to the ports of British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, California, Mexico and the Pacific islands, was lost off one of the islands of the Samoan group some time since. A terrific storm arose, and the brig and a number of schooners went aground, the schooner Solide being a total loss, and other vessels much injured. The Sheet Anchor was owned by Messrs. Wightman & Kustel, of San Francisco, valued at $5,000 and uninsured. There was an insurance of $3,500 on her cargo in the Sun Insurance company, of San Francisco. This is a total loss as the vessel arrived there on March 23d and was lost on the following night. The schooner Facto was built at Eureka and owned by the Kustel Brothers. She has been got off and is on her way to San Francisco. The Sheet Anchor has been lying these waters a quarter of a century at least, and was perhaps more generally known than any other vessel on the Pacific ocean.

For a Neat Fitting Boot Or Shoe, go to P. J. Goodman, on Chenamus street, next door to I. W. Case. All goods of the best make and guaranteed quality. A full stock; new goods constantly arriving. Custom work.

If you want extra nice Jellies and Marmalades go to A. M. JOHNSON & Co's.

Take notice of Sheriff O'Neil's new advertisement.

Closing Saloons at Midnight

No one act of Mayor Stowell has caused so much comment as his order to close saloons at midnight, and the result of the order is watched by cities all over the country with much interest. We fear that the mayor has never experienced the sensation of being drunk after midnight. There is no more comparison between an ordinary afternoon drunk and a drunk after midnight, than there is between liver and quail on toast. That's what a drunkard of over thirty years standing tells us. He says that an afternoon or an evening drunk is very tame, because the drunken man is constantly haunted by the fear that he will meet somebody who knows him and who is sober. But after midnight he can stagger about and be monarch of all he surveys. After midnight he disturbs nobody but the policeman and night watchman, and he can whomp it up to his heart's content. If he feels that he can enjoy himself by throwing a beer keg through a saloon window, a crowd does not collect to molest him and make him afraid. The mayor has evidently not taken into consideration the enjoyment he is cutting off. And by his order to close at midnight, the mayor has destroyed, entirely, the effect of the national hymn, entitled, "We Won't go Home Till Morning." What party of convivial gentlemen could have the heart to sing the old song around the festive board, when they know that when the hands of the clock point to twelve they would be bonned from the saloon, and become wanderers on the face of the earth, with no friendly bar at which they could slack their thirst. Thus, the old song is wiped from the statute book, as it were, by a stroke of the Mayor's pen. With this midnight closing order in force, men have got to commence several hours earlier to get drunk, if they expect to accomplish the task before midnight, and the mayor must know what a hardship this will be; and how difficult it is to get drunk in the limited time allotted, where the beer glasses are so small, and there is so much foam in them.

The mayor will find, when it is everlastingly too late, that some of his constituents will be compelled to go home comparatively sober, at twelve o'clock, however hard they may try to get drunk by the official schedule time. The spectacle of men going home sober, at 12 o'clock, who have always gone home drunk a few hours later, ought to melt the heart of even a mayor. Such a state of disgusting sobriety will cause strong drunkards to weep, when they realize their humiliating position. What excuse can a man, who has been in the habit of going home drunk, along in the morning hours, make to his wife when he comes home at such an early hour only half full? He can lay it to the mayor, of course, but a wife who has become accustomed to such a state of things will be apt to look upon the excuse as too thin, and will ask the husband why he didn't commence to get drunk earlier so as to have the feat accomplished at the hour provided by law. Women do not stop to reason in such cases. They cannot realize that it takes time to change the combination of the drunkard's system, so that it will get in its work three hours earlier than it has been set to operate for so many years. This order of the mayor will prove a great hardship to many hard working women. They have got to be in the habit of sleeping early in the night and waking up at three o'clock in the morning to help their husbands in the house and to bed. This order will compel them to get up at twelve o'clock, and that they will be so broken in their rest that the labor of the next day, by which they support the family and furnish money for the husband to get drunk, will be harder than ever. It is plain that the mayor never was a woman, or he would know better than to discourage domestic affairs in such a manner. There is no doubt the mayor has meant well by his order, but it is going to make trouble.—Milwaukee Sun.

Row Over a Poker Game

About two o'clock yesterday morning a poker game in upper Astoria was interrupted by one of the players undertaking to carve his opponent with a knife. The facts seem to be that two of the players were fishermen, who had lost some of their hard earned gold to a man named Frank Smith. A partner of the fishermen, seeing they were losing, sat in to make his partner's losses good by his superior skill, and when the game got noisy all emerged on the roadway, where the drowsy car of night was sadly vexed by the unseemly discordance. Knives were drawn, stones flung and much loud talk indulged in, but fortunately no blood was spilt. Smith is reported to have skipped, being ahead of the game $60.

SONG OF THE SEA.

Hurrah for the sea—where the chowders And the sculpin winds his horn! Where the star-fish shine through the spiny brinns. And the man-of-war oysters yawn! For the barnacle blows and the eel-crowns As we chase the pickled prawn.

Then roll out the captain's gig, my lads! Let the hobstays harness'd be! With the breeze abaft and fore-and-aft We'll drive o'er the wind-whipped sea.

Hear the bo'son shout—"Let the port-latch loose! Haul the affidavits taut! Like snowy clouds spread the white, white shrouds Where the dead-light's gleam is caught! Belay the keel till the compass heel! And the water-line runs short!"

The main-sheet fills with the mad moon-noon. We have furled the fore-cross-tree, And so lightly leech'd the vessel's waist, As we skim o'er the creamy sea.

The sea-gulls shriek from the for'ard peak. As the shrimp go prancing by, And the mermaids coy, kiss the white-ting'd buoy.

Where the archin pipes his eye; The dog-fish bark at the tipsy shark. And the halibut joins the cry.

Then, cheer, mates, cheer, as the good ship speeds, Till we make the hawser gee! For the wind in the sail blows a mariner's gale, And we plough the furrowed sea.

Ho, binacle, fly from the captain high! Make the mizen-scupper's fast! By the lanyard's light, through the nasty night, We will scud before the mast; For the breeze is a-lee, and the rover is free, And the schooner of beer has passed.

Hurrah for the ship! Hurrah for the crew! Merry, merry boys are we—And our course is pressed for the North-west, As we rise on the yeasty sea.

Canned Sturgeon.

Philadelphia's principal sturgeon market is at Dock street wharf, where any morning a dozen celled men, naked to their waists, may be seen butchering the monster fish. When the heavy skin is taken off the flesh is yellow and rich looking. A sturgeon that weighs 100 pounds in its coat of mail will weigh but 75 pounds when dressed. The dressed fish sell at from 5 to 7 cents per pound, and much of the flesh goes to Trenton, where it is smoked and sold for salmou. Some idea of the magnitude of the trade may be had from the fact that one firm on Delaware avenue handle five tons of dressed sturgeon meat every day of the season. The eggs, packed in hermetically sealed fire-gallon cans, are shipped to Germany, France, Denmark and other European countries, where they are made into caviare.

Something new in Navigation.

The ship City of Brooklyn is 29 years old, and during these years of her youth has apparently been well behaved and of good disposition. Of late, however, she has shown a disposition to balkiness and does not "come around" obediently. It is even said that she will not "stay." Capt. Swan thinks that he has discovered the reason of the gallant ship's disobedient conduct, and has governed himself accordingly; he has removed the figure head. Sea captains say they never heard before of a figure head interfering with the navigation of a ship. This then is a nautical discovery and should be given to the world. Navigation is truly an interesting science.—Seattle Herald.

Steamer Days.

The Fishermen's Friend.

Crowds of fishermen are leaving us on every steamer, some sad over their poor luck, some elated with well filled pockets of hard-earned dollars, most of them well dressed and provided for; they call on their friend M. D. Kant, the Boss Merchant Tailor and Clothier, and get an outfit from head to foot. They all know very well what they are doing, they get the best of goods, the lowest prices, and have the finest assortment of clothing, furnishing goods, boots and shoes, hats and caps, trunks and valises, to select from. He is getting in new goods on every steamer and sells them at bed-rock prices.

EDITOR ASTORIAN: It has been stated in the newspapers and repeated on the streets, that two of the parties who were, as we believe justly, flogged by the citizens' committee, were Italians, and being of that nationality ourselves, we decidedly object to having our countrymen accused of a crime for which they are in no-wise responsible. We have taken pains to ascertain the names and nativity of the castigated individuals, and we have found, and wish the public to know, that they were not Italians. It has become a common practice, to attribute to our countrymen almost every crime committed on the Columbia river; this has undoubtedly been thoughtlessly done, without considering the injustice of it. Now we, by which is meant the Italians of this community, are as much in favor of maintaining the law as the best and most law-abiding citizens, among which we claim to rank, and when any countryman of ours is guilty of any crime let him be punished for it, but they were not Italians.
