A Big Job.

Under the treaty with the Creek "Himself a Bavariau," of Indians in 1866, congress appro- says, "Villard has still printed $100,000 to pay those heart for the fatherland Creeks who were loyal during the sequently desires to see the the character and amount of dam- in a month or two." ages thus sustained and with that reckless liberality that usually characterizes such bodies when the government is to pay the amount of awards, the commission reported that the damages sustained amounted to $1,900,000 and recommended that the amount be appropriated. Congress paid no attention to this report, but this fact has not prevented certain lobbyists from putting forth efforts to obtain the full amount of the to secure the approval of Commissioner Price and did not renew their efforts to secure the full approval of the department when Secretary Teller returned to Washington. Nothing further was done in this direction until after the departure of Secretary Teller, and company. when the agents appeared at the department again and orged that

In order to stop this effort to obtain from the treasurer a large sum of money to which there is believed to be no claim whatever, Commissioner Price, when the matter was again presented to him, wrote a history of the case and protested against affirmative action on the part of the department. The commissioner's vigorous paper was forwarded to Secretary Teller at Denver and a copy laid before Assistant-Secretary Joslyn for that officer's information. The character of the parties pushing this Creek claim, and the fact that their efforts are made only during the absence of the chief of the interior department, are sufficient to excite suspicion, if not to condemn the scheme.

the contract be approved.

THE Independent cays of suicides and the press: Some eight or ten years ago, at a convention of Italian journalists at Turin, it was resolved to abstain from printing detailed notices of suicide-so obvious was it that the hope of such publicity was, in a multitude of cases, a leading motive of the crime. Such a combination among American editors is not to be ex- law. pected, nor, perhaps, desired. If there is suicide's erime, as they deserve. If there is guilt in contributing to the self-extinction from the earth of such contemptible lives, that guilt must be shared by those whose verdicts of "temporary insanity" and whose gush of sympathy over the "victims of appetite" and their "sensitive natures" help to elevate the suicide, for the moment, into a tragic hero.

Dorsey is caustic in his replies. Retorting upon Wayne McVeagh

he says:

I never saw a man with the face of a fox or the chin of a lizard that I thought it safe to trust. I wouldn't give much for a fellow whom you can cut in two and not I never saw a man with the face of a fox or the chin of a lizzard that I thought it safe to trust. I wouldn't give much for a fellow whom you can cut in two and not get a drop of blood from either side. I'd wager you $100 that you could lay Wayne MacVeagh upon the block of truth and slaphim in two with a cleaver, and instead of the warm blood of humanity would come the chilled

THE Alta says that a large num ber of people are going to California from Oregon and Washington Territory, "because of the drouth." If that be so, and it must be so or the Alta wouldn't say so, then the action of these people affords a brilliant illustration of what is called "jumping out of the frying pan into the fire." They are leaving the occasional for the usual.
