

The Daily Astorian

ASTORIA, OREGON: SATURDAY.....AUGUST 11, 1883 -Upper Astoria is to have a Good Templar lodge. -There seems to be a boom in the matrimonial market. -Warranty and quit claim deeds at THE ASTORIAN OFFICE. -The bank will close to-day at 1 P. M., but will reopen at 6 P. M. -A bunch of keys with marked tag awaits an owner at this office. -The Gen. Miles goes to Gray's harbor next Tuesday evening. -Rev. W. T. Chapman returned yesterday from the Ocean Park camp meeting. -August Hagemyre, an overworked Olympia shoemaker, hanged himself last Wednesday. -The State left yesterday afternoon. Fishing gear formed a considerable part of her Astoria freight. -The Oregon State Normal school at Monmouth will open its second session on Tuesday, September 18. -Diabrow, the only one of the escaped Salem convicts at large, has been heard from near Crescent city, Cal. -One of the workmen employed on the O. R. & N. dock had his foot badly mangled yesterday afternoon by a falling timber. -The first shipment of this season's wheat has been received at Portland. It is of fair quality and is quoted at 1 3/4 cental. -E. C. Holden advertises special auction sale at his auction rooms this morning at ten o'clock of smuggled goods and sundries. -Anyone finding a pocket book containing some papers of no value to any one but the owner, will please leave it at this office. -The A. B. Field will leave for Tillamook at six o'clock this morning. Capt. Babbige reports the Tillamook wasps as being unusually active. -H. G. Hurlbut's surveying party are camped at Rupert's place about forty miles above Jewell. W. A. Foster started with his pack train a few days ago for the camp and will stay with them till they reach Forest Grove. -Will C. King one of the clearest headed lecturers in the field delivered an address at upper Astoria last evening that was one of the most convincing arguments ever adduced in support of the cause he so strenuously advocates. -The California fish commission have seven deputies, and two sloops at work in an endeavor to stop illegal salmon catching on the Sacramento river; the canneries have raised a fund to aid in prosecuting all violations of the law. Trouble is anticipated. -Livingston Stone has made a proposition to the California fish commissioners to furnish 600,000,000 salmon eggs for $2,500, and guarantees to place the young salmon in such streams as the commission may designate. Of course, the proposition was accepted. -Chaplain Scott, in the absence of Rev. Mr. McLafferty, will preach Sunday morning in the Baptist church, and deliver a lecture to the young people in the evening upon "emergencies and how to meet them." This will probably be the last services the Chaplain will hold here for some time. -Some of the boys that struck in the Call office are dropping up this way. They say they were foolish and they are right about it. Whenever a young chap has a steady sit, earning from $24 to $28 a week in an office that pays good wages, and gets his back up because he can't boss the office, a little prodigal son business will do him good. -The Portland Y. M. C. Association have recently fitted up its rooms and made them more attractive for strangers and visitors, but stultified itself by announcing that "hoodlums" will not be admitted. It is just such "I am holier than thou" kind of action that is a stumbling block in the way of good. Real christian philanthropy would say "all are welcome," and prove it by actions. -Liberty Hall was filled last evening to hear further discussion of the woman suffrage question which was furnished by extended remarks on the part of Mrs. Duniway, after which Edith Conn described the affecting farewell to Father Watkins-ah. C. J. Curtis was called on and in a straight forward manner enunciated the necessity of conforming to the spirit of the age by giving women the ballot. A song by Pearl Holden was followed by some happily turned remarks by Judge Yocum who paid due tribute to woman's ingenuity. Miss Dickinson executed a brilliant solo on the piano, and after some further remarks the audience dispersed. -Rogers Bros. plated ware and Westenhelm cutlery at Jordan & Borth's new store.

The Eastern Visitors

Major General Von Xylander of the Bavarian army, and a member of the staff of the Emperor of Germany, has arrived at New York from Bremen on the steamship Felda. He will form one of the party of about 300 invited guests who are to participate in the ceremonies attending the completion of the Northern Pacific Railroad and its opening to general traffic. A party of thirty, consisting of a number of noblemen, several members of the German Reichstag and representatives of the various institutions in that country, will leave Bremen for this country next Wednesday. A number of guests, among whom will be two or three members of parliament, will leave England about the same time. Among others who are expected to go with the great junketing party will be General Grant, Secretary Lincoln, William M. Everts, several foreign ministers, members of congress and the various state legislatures, and a few governors. The whole party will be in charge of Henry Villard. The last spike on the road, will be driven September 8th at a point about fifty miles west of Helena, M. T. The road will not be open to the public in its entirety until after the ceremonies on the 8th of next month. The various members of the party will leave New York on the 9th inst. for St. Paul. On their way they will visit Niagara Falls, Buffalo and Chicago. At Minneapolis and St. Paul they are to be banqueted. They will go to the end of the route, British Columbia and the Willamette Valley. The party will start on their homeward journey about the 25th of September. They will either visit the Yellowstone Park or go to San Francisco and return by the Southern Railroad through New Mexico and the other states and territories of the southwest and south. They are expected to return to the east about the beginning of October.

The Other Side

Chas. Olsen, who has been accused of deserting his family in Portland, tells a very different story. He says he came here to get work at his trade, being a painter; that on account of disagreement with his wife he offered to take two of the children, leaving the youngest in her care; that three weeks ago she came here, and while here she offered to give him charge of the children if he paid her $15 a month; that he said he would give her $20; at that time paying her hotel bill and giving her $18; and, that to do what he thought his duty in the case, he yesterday took charge of the children, relieving the mother of all future responsibility concerning them. This is his version of the matter, and to the publication of which he is entitled.

How The Firemen in the British Metropolis Take Things Easy

A Chicago man who has been to London thus tells how they put out fires there. "Near the American Exchange, at the corner of the Strand and Adelaide street, is the Chandos street station of the Metropolitan fire brigade. Here are located a manual engine and a steamer and twelve or fourteen firemen. One day I chanced to be passing the brigade station when a young fellow, all excitement and perspiration, rushed up from the direction of Drury lane and breathlessly shouted: 'Urry up here! There's a fire just breakin' hout in Drury lane. Look sharp, now!' The engineer who was in charge of the place turned to a group of firemen and said 'Arry, put on your 'elmet and go see what it is.' 'Arry proceeded to don the brigade tunic and the 'elmet and started off on a run in the direction of Drury lane. He was gone perhaps ten minutes. When he hoave in sight again he had his 'elmet in his hand, the perspiration rolled from his flaming brow, and he was puffing like a locomotive. 'Come along,' he managed to articulate, 'it's a sure-enough fire.' The engineer deliberately ordered the manual to be hitched up, and while one man went around the corner to get the horses, two others put the pole in place and the rest of the men put on their tunics and 'elms. When the team was hitched up they pulled out and rattled away over the pavement to Drury lane. Do you know what happened then? No! Well, they got to Drury lane, found that the fire had spread from an upper floor, where it had started to a paint shop on the first floor, and the whole building was booming. Their manual was of no use under heaven, and they rattled back to the station after the steamer. When they returned with the steamer the fire had consumed the interior of the building and its contents, and there was no use for the engine. So they quietly returned to their quarters."

East of Astoria

The collier Walla Walla, with two-thirds of a load, struck Wednesday night at St. Helen's bar, and a barge was sent down yesterday to lighter part of her cargo of coal. As soon as she discharges the remainder of her cargo here, she will go to St. Helen's bar and repeat last year's sluicing operations. At Swan island bar there is now twenty feet of water, and the river is six feet above low water mark. By the middle of next month, unless something is done, vessels drawing fifteen feet or over can not reach Portland. Owing to the peculiar hard character of the deposit at Swan island bar, the city dredge alone is not able to remove it. The United States engineer has two dredge boats well adapted for this work-the Osgood dredge and the clam-shell dredge. These can be used advantageously in removing the upper and harder crust, and the city's boat following them up will work well in cutting the channel to the depth of twenty feet. But the government has practically no funds. It will be legal, and it is in the highest sense necessary for the city council to appropriate from the Willamette river fund, an amount sufficient to pay the running expense of the government boats. Even with all three boats employed, the work must be slow, because so much time is lost in getting out of the way of passing craft. It will be humiliating next month when the Northern Pacific is finished and the city is left with eastern visitors, to acknowledge that Portland has not enough public spirit to clean her river. There are not ten citizens who will object to the appropriation, and the council should act in the matter at next Wednesday's meeting. -Oregonian, 10.

Ocean Park

Ed. ASTORIAN The Ocean Park campmeeting closed on Monday the 6th inst. The attendance was larger than the friends of the enterprise anticipated. Nearly all sections of the country from Jacksonville to Puget Sound were represented. The best of order prevailed from first to last. Through many left at the close of the meeting, many remained to enjoy for a longer time the excellent advantages of this seaside resort. Some are there to stay until September rains shall have relieved the interior of smoke and dust. Reinforcements arrive to take the place of those who find themselves obliged to return to home and business. The fifty lots offered for sale at forty dollars each, were all taken before the close of Aug. 1st, (the day set for the choosing of these) and many applicants came later, but too late; the price for the second fifty had been fixed at seventy-five dollars. Astoria was up to time, however, and fifteen of the first fifty are held by Astorians. Your correspondent will gladly receive and forward, free of charge, the application of any who may desire a choice lot in the second fifty. W. T. CHAPMAN.
