General Sherman will arrive at Victoria to-morrow, and will visit the Coumbia river this week. His visit to this section, his prominent position and the near approach of the time when he retires from command to be succeeded by General Phil. Sheridan, lends an interest in the popular mind to the old soldier, whose march to the sea is one of the events of modern his-

General Sherman is a native of Ohio. He was born at Lancaster, on the 8th of February 1820. He grad nated at West Point in his twenty first year, and saw military service in Florida and the war with Mexico and owners recommending that grade be elsewhere, before resigning his commission in the year 1853. Upon his grading and fencing cometery grounds business in San Francisco, as a banker, gard to road and fence; remainder of York city. From 1857 to 1859 he report referred for amendment. Of practiced law in Leavenworth, Kansame committee on proposition of sas. During the succeeding time up Union, he acted as superintendent of By the Louisiana Military Academy. His resignation took place in January, 1861, and was almost immediately followed by his return to the army.

The civil war gave Sherman the opportunity of distinguished service, and propriation out of the general fund for p'aced him in the first rank of living generals. His first commission was that of colonel of a regiment of infantry. At the first battle of Bull Run he commanded a brigade of volunteers, and was made brigadier-general of volunteers. After serving a short time in the camp of instruction at St. Louis, he took part in the campaign conducted in the state of Tennessee and Mississippi during which he was promoted to the rank of brigadiergeneral of the regular army. In October, 1863, he succeeded General Grant as commander of the army department of the Tennessee. in March, 1864, General Grant was made lieutenant-general and commander of all the Union force, Sherman succeeded him as commander of the military division of the Mississippi. This included the entire south-west, and his appointment gave him the command of more than a hundred thousand effective troops with whom to operate against General J. E. Johnson. He began the invasion of Georgia on the 2d of May, 1863, making his advance movement at the same time with that of General Grant in the east. His forces were superior in number to those of the Confederate General, who, however, stubbornly contested the advanceat every possible point. There was much hard fighting between the two armies, and it was not until September 2d, that Atlanta was captured by Major-General Sherman, but then newly promoted to this rank. He occupied the city with his army for ten weeks, when he commenced his march to the sea, having previously dispatched some forty thousand men under the command of General Thomas to repel General Hood's advance into Tennessee. His remaining forces consisted of sixty thousand men, more or less. In less than a month they had marched three hundred miles without resistance. His first fight was at Fort McAllister. below Savannah, the surrender of which stronghold preceded that of Savanah by eight days. In the middle of January, 1865, General Sherman began his invasion of the Carolinas. His march through South Carolina occupied six weeks. In North meet next Tuesday evening, the 21st Carolina he encountered considerable opposition, and fought two pitched battles, Goldsboro was occupied on Millen worked their little game very nia fruit that has been received this the 22d of March, 1865, Raleigh, on successfully in Portland.
