An English Lord's Experience in

Lord Higgleton, who came to Arkansas with a view to the purchase of a large tract of timber land, does not like certain social conditions which he found in the remote regions where the steam whistle has never disturbed the quiet of the squatter.

Some time ago, while riding alone through the woods, he lost the pretense of a road he had been attempting to follow. Night came, bringing with it a heavy, black cloud from which a torrent of rain began to pour. Just as he had despaired ot finding a place of shelter, he saw a small light gleaming among the trees. Guiding his horse in that direction he soon came to a fence surrounding a small house.

"Say, my good man." he called. "You bet I'm a good man," replied some one, opening the door. "I'm counted the best man in this community. No longer ago than vesterday I flung Abe Nuckle.

Don't know Abe, I reckin?" "No, I am not acquainted in this country," and, thinking to impress the man with his rank, which in America he knew was always toadied to, he added: "I am the Lord--"

"The devil you say! Then I reckin you air a stranger here. Jule" turning to his wife, git up, the Lord's out here."
