

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1883.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Fifteen Cents Per Week.

Beginning on Saturday, October 27, 1883, THE DAILY ASTORIAN will be delivered to all parts of the city for fifteen cents per week, payable to the carrier.

—Carl Adler is constantly receiving new goods.

—J. Strauss New York Novelty Store opens this week with a fine display.

—Bozorth & Johns advertise for rent a house with five rooms, lot and stable.

—The skating rink is doing a good business, and is a popular place of evening amusement.

—E. C. Holden will have a special auction sale at his rooms to-morrow morning at half-past ten.

—The United States Senate drank 824 worth of Apollonaris water during the last eight days of the last session.

—Mrs. George Flavel, and her daughter, Miss Katie Flavel, go to San Francisco on to-day's steamer, for the winter.

—Senator Sharon pays about one per cent of the taxes collected in San Francisco. Capt. Flavel pays about the same proportion in Astoria.

—The Walla Walla city dads have not got over the Villard celebration yet. What some of them now want to know is how that 8500 was spent.

—Nothing was visible of the Coyote as she started for Knappton yesterday morning, but a smokestack. The rest of the craft was covered with bales of hay.

—C. H. Messenger, postmaster at Yamhill, was accidentally shot last Saturday while out gunning, by J. D. Jones, his companion. He died on Monday morning.

—Anyone desirous of getting furnished rooms, with or without board, can get most desirable accommodations at Mrs. E. C. Holden's, southeast corner Main and Jefferson streets.

—It is contrary to the laws of Washington Territory to race horses with Indians, even for fun. The fine for this offense is not less than fifty nor more than six hundred dollars, and six months imprisonment, or both.

—The A. B. Field will make regular trips to Tillamook, weather permitting, during the winter months. She arrived yesterday afternoon having made three round trips in seven days, and leaves to-morrow for Tillamook at 6 o'clock.

—It isn't much of a "boom," nor any intention to mention it as one, but it looks decidedly healthy to a man to get $250 for an outside lot that cost him $100 three months ago. Astoria property is almost as good a buy as Oregon Transcontinental.

—The unusually large number of vessels in port was yesterday afternoon increased by the arrival of the British bark Ida of Angleson, 117 days from Liverpool, 17 days from Honolulu. Just what these vessels are going to do in the matter of freights is a question.

—Among the other new goods in B. F. Stevens & Co.'s new store is a graphoscope, the lens of which last Saturday afternoon so focused the sun's rays as to cause an incipient fire in a portrait placed for view. It was quickly put out. Such a glass should be a powerful magnifier.

—Report of the bark Ironside: September 18th, lat. 9 deg. 22 min., north, long. 114 deg. 10 min., west, spoke the Newark from San Francisco to Cork, 19 days out; all well. October 10th, lat. 39 deg. 15 min., north, long. 141 deg., west, bark Burnah from Newcastle, N. S. W., to San Francisco.

—People who are in the habit of becoming shipwrecked in the mid-Atlantic, complain that such is the rush now for quick ships that the ocean steamers will not stop to pick a person up. Captain Pande of the Norway bark Lizzie, says five ocean steamers passed the crippled vessel and gave no heed to minute guns and signals of distress.

—Our item yesterday in regard to the reduction in the price of subscription to the DAILY already brings words of encouragement from all sides. It has one effect that we hardly foresaw—nearly all city subscribers to the WEEKLY will probably change to the DAILY. After the 27th the DAILY will be sent to any address in the United States for $7 per annum.

From the Dock to the Docket.

When the Queen came in yesterday morning, J. C. Ross, the O. R. & N. clerk whose business it is to see that the off-going passengers show their tickets, stationed himself as usual at the gangway, and as each one went by made them show his ticket. As one man was passing by he got into an altercation with Ross, which resulted in his striking Ross, who at first made no attempt to defend himself, continuing to ask him for his ticket. Finally Capt. Ingalls appeared, when the belligerent individual was forcibly put ashore, where he was arrested by Policeman Hunter, who had to persuade him considerably to come along. In the meantime the brother of the man took a hand, and considering Ross to be the author of the trouble, struck him, whereupon he, too, was arrested. The two brothers gave bail in the sums of $40 and $20 respectively, to appear in the police court and answer to the charges there preferred against them. At that time Chief Longbray called "John Doe," and "Richard Roe," three times in a loud voice from the court room window, and those unfamiliar names not being responded to, City Attorney Winton started to address the court, but was interrupted by G. C. Fulton, who appeared for the defense, and asked that the case be continued till to-day. His request was promptly granted by the police judge, whereupon Mr. Winton reminded the judge that till the defendants appeared and answered to the complaint he could not continue the case. This argument struck his honor with such force that he promptly reversed his decision of a moment before and declared that the bail was forfeited. There being no further arguments in the case, there were no further decisions, and the outraged peace and dignity of the city was soothed by the covering of three twenty-dollar pieces in the city treasury.

A Sad Duty.

On the arrival of the Queen here on her regular trip on the 1st instant, Capt. Alexander, her popular commander, was so ill with pneumonia that by the advice of Dr. Baker he came ashore for medical treatment. The attack grew more serious, and as the days went by grave doubts were felt as to his possible recovery. On the 8th came the sad news that his wife had died in San Francisco that afternoon, and owing to his precarious condition it was deemed best to keep him in ignorance of that melancholy intelligence. Accordingly he was most sedulously hindered from learning anything about it until yesterday afternoon, when he being able for the first time to get out on the street, Dr. Baker concluded it was about time to let him know. It was a delicate and disagreeable task—to apprise a man who had written a cheery and encouraging letter to his wife but the day before—that that beloved wife was lying cold in death, but it had to be done, and with the utmost care he was told. The shock was a severe one, and his mental suffering was in itself a grief to witness. Sadly he asked for the particulars, and as they were related it indeed seemed a mistaken kindness to have kept the news from him. Dr. Baker has devoted the greatest care to the captain's case, and thinks that with proper caution there is no fear of a relapse. The captain will probably go to San Francisco on the return trip of his vessel.

Le Roi est Mort.

From Clatsop plains comes news that the Clatsop King is dead. Weighed down by years and the knowledge of cruel wrong, this ancient and dishonorable aboriginal has gone to his forefathers. He died on the 15th. He was once a mighty chief, the head of the Clatsop tribe, and joyously roamed these forest wilds and gladly sucked down the succulent clam when our ancestors were cradled in their far-off Eastern homes. His name was Ca-ta-ta. He is gone. His going or coming is not now of prime importance, but there was a time when he was an unholy terror, and his arrival would make trouble in the family. Incidentally it may be mentioned that he killed three wives, and so interfered with the inside works of seven strong men of the tribe that their graves are green these many years by the sounding sea. Catata, had he been a Caucasian, would have been styled "a bad man." As it is, he is a good Indian. Let justice be done to his memory. It is said that he was a friend to the early settlers on Clatsop plains, never took any advantage of them, and helped them in many ways. Catata was a lad when Lewis and Clark came out here, nearly eighty years ago, and remembered all about where they camped and how they looked. But he is gone to the happy hunting grounds, and one of the few remaining links between the savagery of the past and the civilization of the present breaks with his departure.

A Russian Bath.

Everyone knows what a Russian bath is, but not everyone knows that conveniences for the enjoyment of such a luxury exist in upper town. To an ASTORIAN reporter, a habitue related his experience the other day. Inquiring, in passing, to what use that small building was put, the one interrogated said, "That is a Russian bath. You build up a fire and when it is one mass of glowing coals you put in several large stones and get them as hot as it is possible to make them. Then having handy a few buckets of water you throw the water upon those red-hot stones, and climbing to the perch or platform above, enjoy a genuine Russian bath." The informant went on to say that after enjoying the steaming process until almost dissolved, and in a most profuse perspiration, it was customary to go forth in puris naturalibus and plunge into the limpid waters of the cool Columbia, as a bracer.

Death of Thos. Masters.

Pilot Duig received a letter from San Francisco yesterday conveying the news of the death of Thos. Masters, at Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, about six weeks ago. He was about to leave for this northern coast and died suddenly, just before the date set for him to leave. Masters was well known of the Columbia, having run as mate for the O. S. N. Co. for a number of years. He was also bar pilot here in '77 and '78, and went on the schooner Rescue about four years ago, when that vessel went to look for treasure. He had two in the hotel business for the last two or three years and was said to be worth about $10,000.

"By Order of the King."

With reference to the withdrawal of the Northern Pacific Railroad from the Palace Hotel agreement of some weeks ago, we telegraphed to Mr. John Muir on Wednesday last desiring information as to the truth of the report that such a withdrawal had taken place. On Thursday we received the following telegram in reply: ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 18, '83. E. C. Macfarlane & Co., Proprietors: Wasp, San Francisco. Following Associated Press dispatch which appeared two days ago is correct: "The Northern Pacific Railroad has given formal notice to the Transcontinental Association that it will not be a party to the renewal of the special contract system which heretofore been in force between the Union and Central Pacific Railroad Companies and merchants in San Francisco."
