

The Daily Astorian. ASTORIA, OREGON: FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1883

THE national fish commission is about to send one car-load of carp to the Louisville exposition and another for distribution along the line of the Northern Pacific road.

As a means of getting a small part of the enormous emigration that is pouring into the northwest, a writer in the Charleston Courier suggests to southerners that they can find profit in parceling out their vast domains and giving away alternate patches of fifty acres.

In San Francisco it is thought probable that the railroad disagreement as to the question of fares has given rise to the rumors of a change in the attitude of the Central Pacific relative to the northwest trade, among which is the report of a new line of steamers running between Portland and San Francisco in the interests of the above road. There is no disguising the fact that considerable feeling has been engendered by the position assumed by the Northern Pacific in relation to San Francisco, and to the trade of southern Oregon generally, while it is conceded on all sides that competition for California trade between the Northern Pacific and the Central Pacific would lead to a war attended by no profits to the westward, but to the detriment of protecting itself on ocean service, as in addition to colliers in process of construction, the recent purchase of Morgan & Sons' line of iron steamers gave them strength in the event of a disagreement. Besides they had already ordered three large-sized roads involved. It is thought should matters come to a crisis the putting on of steam iron steamers, which will run between New Orleans and New York, so as to allow west to transfer some ships to this coast whenever they deem such a step expedient.

THE Pacific ocean is the great whale fishery of the world. Heretofore New England capital and enterprise have monopolized it to the almost exclusive benefit of New England. Honolulu and San Francisco received a small share of the profits as outfitters of the whaling vessels. The crude oil and bone were shipped east to be worked up and refined. The cost of transportation was thus increased and to the extent of the increase discounted the profits of every crew. It is now announced, says the San Francisco Chronicle, that two companies composed of California capitalists, have organized and incorporated, with the view of transferring the monopoly from the east to this city, each on a capital of $1,000,000. One of these companies will operate with six steamers and two sailing vessels among the whale fisheries of the North Pacific as high as they can go for the iceberg obstructions and along the southern coast, where the most inferior quality of whale abounds, ranging to San Francisco with the crude oil and bone taken on each cruise. The other will erect refineries of the oil somewhere on the Potrero and work it up for the markets of the world. No argument is needed to prove that these two companies will in course of a few years, with ordinary good luck, monopolize the business of whaling and refining whale oil on the Pacific. The wonder is that the enterprise has been so long delayed, considering the superior advantages of this point. Long ago we thought of turning the vast surplus of our orchards into canned fruit for merchandise, and the utilization of our salmon fisheries in the same way, but here right at hand has lain dormant another business that we might have handled quite as easily and as profitably for the taking of it.

SLIGHT ODDS. A Little Story with a Large Moral - One Man who knew his Own Business.

"No, my dear," said the venerable hanger of a country store to a timid little girl who had scarcely come up to the level of the counter. "No, my dear, we haven't any red flannel, but we have some first rate New Orleans molasses."

"Have you BENSON'S CAPSULE PLASTER?" asked a gentleman of a certain druggist whose name could be given were it desired. "I am troubled just now with a touch of my old friend, the lumbago, and the Benson's Plaster seems to go to the spot almost as soon as it touches the skin."

"Not at present," replied the druggist, generally "but we have lots of plasters just as good. There is Allcock's, the Capelinum and others - won't one of them do as well?"

"My dear sir," retorted the gentleman, with a slight show of temper, "I say nothing against those articles, but I am a business man, and always ask for precisely what I want, and for nothing else. I may enlighten you, however, when I say that sometimes ago, for another disease, of which the Capelinum has since cured me, I tried all these you mention, with no appreciable benefit. They are inefficient, every one of them, the moment set of the proprietors of some of them being this: that they make plasters with similar sounding names to deceive the unwary into believing they are the same thing. Experience taught me the difference. I'll go to the next man in your line. Good day."
