

The Daily Astorian. ASTORIA, OREGON: WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1883. AS IT IS.

THE eastern Oregon dweller, says the Wasco Sun, can dig and plow and harvest, but when he comes to dispose of his harvest, he is snubbed by a power which declares, "we own the only way to market. The passes on each side of the Cascades we own. We will not allow a boat on the river to carry passengers or freight—this magnificent river is virtually ours; we have by the power of our capital by carrying passengers at 25 cents each driven off the people's line which carried them for $2.50 and we now rejoice in charging $4.80. We have control of everything connected with the marketing of the products of labor—transportation, telegraphing, expressing; we virtually fix the price of wheat and all products, for are not the Improvement companies and the Transportation companies ours? Coal and wood are ours; and no man can operate in lumber unless he bows to our charge. The public need not think they are a power. Can't we force them to go to Portland, 25 miles out of their way, and pay for handling all their products there? For we are prepared to do it; we get the profit. Won't we charge what we please, for no competition can approach us? We need not build the road from Portland to Astoria or any line under our legitimate charter, yet hold an empire of land in Oregon."

HON. CASSIUS M. CLAY has written a letter in which he says: "Ex-President Samuel J. Tilden having declined the nomination for the presidency in 1884, Governor-elect Hoadley of Ohio, is the man. With genius, common sense, and great experience in affairs, bold, individual, and magnetic, altogether of such stuff as heroes are made of, let Hoadley be our nominee for president in 1884, and the Republicans will go."

Four years ago the question that agitated the minds of western Washingtonians was "who is Hall?" Hall was ostensibly a land agent at Olympia, but a mystery to everyone. He finally disappeared. It now transpires that his name was T. C. Calvert, of Bowling Green, Ky., whose ideas on the acquisition of property were so indistinct as to occasion his hurried departure from the blue grass region.

The Prince of Wales, in closing the International Fisheries Exhibition at London, announced that the substantial surplus would be devoted to improving the condition of the fishermen. He expressed the hope that hygienic and inventors' exhibitions would be held soon, and said he proposed to have a colonial exhibition in 1886.

CAREY is in his grave, a group of informers are drifting about on a British vessel, afraid to land in any part of the world, a detective in the Phoenix Park murder case has just been driven by the persecutions of the Fenians to attempt his own life, and McDermott is afraid to leave his English prison for fear of assassination.

"The Republican party of the nation," Senator Frye of Maine says, "is in a much better condition to-day than it was nine months before Garfield's election. The trouble is, people forget. The Republican party will win in 1884."

MR. VILLARD has stabled Old Nig, the horse which drew the first and last loads of rails for the Northern Pacific road, comfortably in New York, there to pass the remainder of his days in peaceful enjoyment of all the oats he can eat.

It is somewhat noteworthy that, while the aggregate vote for governor in Ohio was 718,166, there were, as the official count shows, only 11 scattering votes, all the rest being given to the four regularly nominated candidates.

The Chicago Times has been sued by the People's Railway Company of America, for $500,000 for saying that the company "is as villainous a scoundrel as was ever concocted to rob poor simple people of their money."

It is estimated that over 1,000 hunters are engaged in slaughtering deer and buffalo along the line of the Northern Pacific, between Mandan and Livingston, Montana, and the game is fast disappearing.

A FIERCE tornado swept over the Northern and New England states last Monday, causing widespread disaster to shipping, resulting in great loss of life on the lakes and Atlantic coast.

There are Democratic Governors in twenty-six of the thirty-eight States, including New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and yet the presidential year abounds with uncertainties.

AMONG the 50,000 postmasters in the United States, $8,000 a year is the highest salary, and five cents is the lowest. There are forty-seven who receive one dollar a year salary.

SAN FRANCISCO freights are so low that ships are going elsewhere in search of cargo.

EXECUTIVE STYLE. CONTRARY to the usual custom President Arthur is scrupulously careful concerning the letting out of a single word of his annual message until congress has first read it. He will probably write his message, as he did last year, at high pressure. The sheets will be written in the president's little private room, and the first light of dawn will tinge some of them, for the president thinks he does his best work after midnight. The chief magistrate, as he writes his message, has no companions but some choice cigars, and his desk is heaped with reports, documents and manuscript. Last year President Arthur was very nervous lest his message should get to the press before it reached congress. He sent for the public printer and said: "Mr. Rounds, can I depend upon you to put my message into type and keep it away from the newspapers?" "You can, sir," said Rounds. "Very well; I'll try you, and shall hold you personally responsible for its safety."

The public printer took the manuscript, rushed back to the government's great workshop, cut the manuscript into very small takes, took off his coat, put on his apron, and with his chief clerk, set the type for the most important parts. The president sat up all night reading the proofs as they were sent up, galley by galley, from the printing office. The public printer watched each proof as closely as though it had been a government bond. At six o'clock the message was in type, revised, and the president went to bed. At noon it went to congress. From beginning to end it will be seen that it is no child's play to write and send to congress a message of this sort.

Tax debt of the United States government was diminished by $10,304,798 during the month of October. The present interest bearing debt of this country is $1,312,446,050.

The Prussian Government has made offers for the purchase of six railway lines, which, if accepted, will put the entire Prussian system in the hands of the state.
