KILLED ON THE ELASKANINE.

Fatal Ending of a Dispute Regarding Land.

A shooting affray occurred on the Klas kanine, near Kamm's farm, yesterday morning, which resulted in the killing of Jack Leonard, a well-known 'longshorean, and the serious wounding of Lem Johnson, a resident of that vicinity.

It seems that three brothers named Lesby bave claims on the Klaskanine Leshy have claims on the Klaskmine adjoining each other, and one of them, John Leahy, has had some trouble with Leonard regarding his land. Sometime ago, Leonard, who had been working at the different docks in this city, went up to the Klaskanine, "to look after his claim," as he said. Yesterday morning, in company with Lem Johnson, Smith and another man, he went down to Leahy's claim to take away a barn

A Woman's Lonely Horseback Ride.

There arrived in San Francisco last

resporter:

"I formerly resided in California, but some years ago removed with my folks to Green Lake county. Wis. I always had a desire to revisit this state and once more inhale the refreshing air of the golden west. My father presented me with a mare—Kitty is her name. She'll be eight years old this spring, and I told my relatives on several occasions that Kitty and I were going to take a trip to California, but they only laughed at me. They thought that I would never attempt to cross the plains, but they were mistaken, for Kitty and I and a year-ling colt left Wisconsin on the 24th of last April. I was always fond of riding."

"What outfit did you take with you?"

sked the reporter.

asked the reporter.

"Well, I only took Kitty and the colt, an oil-coat, a small buffalo robe, two saddle blankets and s small sum of money. When I started out I had a regular Texas saddle, with two cinches on it, but it was too hard and heavy, so at the first opportunity I traded it off for a Chicago saddle."

Oysters, Oysters, Oysters, the continuation of the Astoria Oyster depot: a stew, fry, pan roast, or raw at Frank Fabre's. Fixest fixed up Billiand Sample Room in the City.

"What was your idea in setting out on the expedition?"
"The novelty and romance of the trip and a desire to see the country." replied the transcontinental equestrienne.
"Did the trip meet all your expecta-tions?"

"Well, it more than met them in one

"How was that?"
"In starvation and hardship. For about two hundred miles on one part of the road—it was near Soda Springs in Idaho—I did not see a ranch, and for three days and nights I had nothing to live upon but water. This was the worst part of the trip. There may have been ranches some distance from the road, but I never left the trail."
"But how did you find your way?" asked the reporter: "were you not afraid of

"But how did you find your way?" asked the reporter; "were you not afraid of getting lost?"

"No. I asked the road from station to station. I followed the railroad line to Rollins and then to Green River, thence to Soda Springs, and from there to Boise City; from Boise City to Baker
City, and thence to John Day's bridge, across John Day's river into Idaho; then I crossed Snake river and rode on to Pendleton, and from there I arrived at Portdleton, and from there I arrived at Port-land about October 19th. I would have ridden from Portland here but for the lateness of the season and the scarcity of food on the road."

food on the road."
"What was your method of traveling?"
"I generally started at daylight and rode until 11 o clock and then rested until 1 or 2 o'clock in the afternoon. At this time it was cooler and I again started out and rode until I would strike good feed for Kitty, or if I could not find it I would ride until sunset. I averaged about twenty-five miles a day, but my bianest day's journey was sixty-three among total strangers and far from home yet no friend or relative could have given more zealous attention, and his last house for same southed by the consciousness that his wife and family would not be destitute.

The funeral will be from the Masonic Lodge at half-past one this afternoon. The funeral procession will start from the lodge room at 2 o'clock and proceed to the Presbyterian church.
