The way to build up a town is to believe in it—become inspired with a faith that it is a future for it; and for every citizen to take an energetic hand to make it what it ought to be. This, in brief, is local pride—it is local public spirit that does not hesitate to make a present sacrifice in the faith that it will make the town in which we live in some way better in the future.

The Proper Caper. A neatly printed, attractive little book has just issued from the press of the Appleton's with the title "Don't." It refers to "mistakes and improprieties more or less prevalent in conduct or speech," and contains many valuable suggestions. But it is attuned to tickle only ears polite, and is calculated to strike the average American citizen, who aspires to do the proper thing, with a cold hand.

There is a good deal of lumber about this sort of thing, the form being laid more stress on as a rule than the substance, and it is perfectly safe for the individual to subject all such recommendations to the test of common sense in the light of experience. It is important certainly to know what things are dangerous to society and avoid them, but, given the knowledge, the heart, if it is a good one, or can simulate a good one, will dictate the rest. It is but fair to observe that most promulgations of social forms lay down some such principle as this, but they drift off into setting forth rules many of which are wholly artificial and fanciful. For those people who can not think for themselves dogmas have been more or less useful, whether in politics, religion, or in the regulation of social conduct, and we protest against being considered ill-mannered if we fail to comply with certain things set down in the books.

For instance, the censor in "Don't" tells us not to eat soup from the end of the spoon, but from the side. Now there are numerous individuals wearing mustaches who have given the end of the spoon consideration, and they have, most of them, come to the conclusion that it is not only more convenient but better mannered to use the end of the spoon rather than to dabble their mustache through the whole length of the trough, as it were, every time they raise the spoon to their lips. It is more agreeable to themselves and to those present. The law is also laid down that you shall not leave your knife and fork on your plate when sending for a second supply. This is well enough perhaps, but it strikes the author of "Don't" as not being entirely orthodox, and he enters into a deep train of thought concerning it, which leaves him with the impression that the strictly just process to pursue is to divide the responsibility and retain the knife in the hand while the fork follows the fortune of the plate. The subject is rather too abstruse to require careful treatment in an editorial article, and, since authorities differ, we are compelled to leave it in a painful state of uncertainty. We cordially ignore the injunction, however, not to spit bones and other rejected matter out in a reckless manner, involving as it does the peace of mind and clothes of one's neighbors, but to lower them carefully to the plate with the fork. And "don't," says this authority, "use a steel knife with fish, and then to assure us how unnecessary it is to do this, it explains that a silver knife is now placed by the side of each plate for the fish course. Now there are a few secluded spots into which the full light of civilization has not penetrated where a silver knife is not thus placed. In such an emergency the only plan seems to be to omit the fish.

We are also entreated not to wear soiled linen, and above all things not to blow the nose with the fingers, in a work which concerns itself with fine and interesting points, these admonitions would scarcely seem to be necessary. The person who bothers himself with the difficult problem as to the disposition of the knife and fork when sending his plate for a second supply, very rarely, if ever, has any inclination to blow his nose with his fingers. Still it is well not to leave any points uncovered.

THE ASTORIA RAILROAD.

Correspondence Between Mr. Villard and the Chamber of Commerce.

The following is furnished by E. C. Holden, Secretary of the Astoria Chamber of Commerce, for publication, in accordance with a resolution passed at the last meeting of the chamber.

On the 15th of last September Mr. Villard wrote a letter from Portland to the chamber in which he said: "Regarding the conference had with the committee of your Chamber of Commerce at my office in this city on April 24th, last, I am only now able to make the promise that I should that I would inform your Chamber of Commerce at the earliest possible moment of the result of the survey of the Astoria-Forest Grove line. So many unforeseen obstacles were encountered in making the surveys that it was a matter of absolute impossibility to complete the work at an earlier date. I regret to say that the estimates of the cost of the line in question, now before me, are so large that it will be impossible for the Oregon & California Railroad Company, or any other company, to undertake its construction. According to the engineers' figures, the cost will be no less than an average of $30,000 per mile, in money, not including the probable cost of proper terminal facilities at Astoria, estimated at $750,000. Under the existing mortgage we could not possibly raise more than $1,000,000 nominal amount of $30,000 per mile in bonds on the line, and there are absolutely no means to meet the deficiency at the command of either party. We must, therefore, abandon the project."

To this, on the 18th of September, the following telegraphic reply was sent: "If contract for building Astoria and Forest Grove railroad complete could be let at $20,000 per mile, and bonds for terminals at Astoria donated, will you commence construction of road?"

On Sept. 21st, Mr. Villard telegraphed in response: "Will be very glad to pay anyone who will build in accordance with engineers' plans and specifications, twenty thousand dollars per mile in first, and ten thousand dollars per mile in second mortgage bonds, all the available money, the company has, provided proper terminal facilities in Astoria are assured. To correct misimpression will add that the estimate of cost includes full equipment of buildings, disbursements, interest during construction, general expenses, and other items not included in the estimates proper of the engineers."

On September 23rd the following telegram was sent by the chamber of commerce to Mr. Villard: "Will you permit us to examine your engineers' plans and specifications with a view of deciding about the acceptance of your offer?"

On October 2 the following dispatch was received from Mr. Villard in reply: "Your position is not consistent. You first disputed correctness of our survey; now you wish to use it to base bids on. I cannot allow anyone to use the benefit of our survey without reimbursement of cost."

Upon receipt of the foregoing the chamber deemed it advisable to send Mr. Villard a letter of which the following is a copy: ASTORIA, Oct. 20th, 1888.

Henry Villard, President N. P. R. R. New York.

Dear Sir:—Your telegram of October 2nd has been received. The chamber directs me to reply that there seems to be some misunderstanding. The chamber's first inquiry of September 18th is as follows: "Will you build in accordance with our engineers' plans and specifications twenty thousand dollars a mile, lands for terminals at Astoria donated, and full equipment of buildings, disbursements, interest during construction, general expenses, and other items not included in the estimates of the engineers?"

It was based on a proposition made to build a standard gauge road. Your answer of September 23rd to that inquiry was that you would be very glad to pay anyone who would build in accordance with your engineers' plans and specifications twenty thousand dollars per mile in first and ten thousand dollars per mile in second mortgage bonds, provided proper terminal facilities in Astoria assured. We then asked permission to see the plans and specifications and you replied that the figures of our engineers were first dispute the correctness of our survey and now wish to use it to base bids on. We have not intended to dispute the figures of your engineers, but if we can see our way to raise the amount of money required over and above the twenty thousand dollars first mortgage and ten thousand dollars second mortgage bonds and place ourselves in a position to build the road as you wish, it is not apparent to us how we are inconsistent in asking to be permitted to see the plans and specifications in accordance with which we are required to build. You certainly could not expect anyone to undertake a contract on unknown plans. It is for the express purpose of placing ourselves in a position to determine if we can or cannot find sufficient means to build the road that we ask the privilege of seeing your plans and specifications. And with this explanation we again ask to be allowed to see the plans and specifications. Very respectfully,

E. C. HOLDEN, Secretary Astoria Chamber of Commerce.

To this the following was in due time received in answer: New York, Oct. 31, 1888.

E. C. Holden, Esq., Secretary Astoria Chamber of Commerce.

DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 23rd inst. is received. I am obliged to say in reply that I have no right to be president of the Oregon & California Railroad Company, and as president of the lease company, to give the Astoria Chamber of Commerce or any one else the benefit of the information of our survey collected at a large expense without a proper consideration therefor. Respectfully yours,

H. VILLARD.

CONVICTING.—C. H. Bailey was arrested by Detective Jones last night, upon Governor Stoneham's warrant, issued on the requisition of the Governor of Oregon. The charge is embezzlement, and the warrant directs that the prisoner shall be turned over to the custody of W. L. Robb, specially appointed to receive him. The prisoner claims he is charged with the embezzlement of $25.—S. F. Bulletin.

It appears that the requisition is for embezzlement, and the warrant charges him with larceny. When last heard from an attempt was being made to get Bailey out on writ of habeas corpus. He is reported to be ahead of the town about $400.

Officers and Seamen of the Coloma Lost.

The British steamer Bell Rock, from the Sandwich Islands, reports that the American bark Coloma, from Portland, Or., for Hongkong, had arrived at Hongkong on the 9th instant short a first and second mate and two seamen, all of whom were lost at sea. The Coloma left Portland October 23d, and all went well until the afternoon of November 6th. At that time the vessel was under full sail, making about nine and one-half knots an hour. The second officer, J. Deshon, was in the chains leaving the lead when he lost his balance and went overboard. A life buoy was thrown to him, but he failed to catch it and a boat manned by A. Seward, the chief officer, and two seamen was sent to the rescue. They failed to find Deshon and had not been out long before they began making signals of distress. The captain sent another boat to the relief of the first and then hauled the ship up to the wind and lay to. After about two hours' absence the second boat came alongside, but nothing had been seen of the boat of the first officer, and there is no doubt but that the boat was swamped and the occupants drowned, as a heavy sea was running at the time.—S. F. Bulletin.
