The Weather Yesterday.

At 2 yesterday morning hailstones as stoamers doing a local business, one large large as pigeons' eggs fell with a dull sailing ship from the Pacific, and here strugging daylight disclosed lateral lines of slanting rain descending; at 8:30 the sun shone out in all its winsome strength and gladsome beauty; at 9, wind from the same west drove flying scul before it; had it driven it behind it dire results in the sheltered covas is carried on indifnight have ensued; at 10 heavy rain fell; fcrently. At one point there is a large at 11 the rain continued to fall; at 12.30 saw-mill, to which logs are brought on a darkness was upon the face of the deep well-constructed narrow-gange railrond, and the spirit of the storm moved over the land; at 12 the sun again smiled upon the sons and daughters of men; at 12:30 there are one or two dry docks, where an daughters of men; at 12:30 there are one or two dry docks, where rain fell; at 12:40 hail fell; at 12:50 snow fell; at 1 r. m. the glass began to fall; at 140 the rain fell also, and nothing being fell; at 1 F. at the glass began to fall; at 140 the rain fell also, and nothing being done to stop the fall of these several con-situents, the falling process went on; at 215 the same perverse breeze from the tumbling western main sprang up once swooped down from Washington Terri-tory and enveloped this section of the till the lifting clouds showed a sunlit sky; then it began to freeze; over the lull enme a storm elond from the folds of which

Steaming from Portland to Astoria, we passed over the most important part of the Columbia, so far as business is con-

owing to a favorable feeding season up north. The canvasback feeds on the roots of the so-called wild calery, and is the best diver for this kind of food, the hulb of which alone it eats, after wrest-ing it from the bottom by a long struggle under water. The widgeon ean't dive for it where the water is deep, but hangs around on the surface and steals it from the canvasback when it comes up with a balb in its tidl, and before it recovers cerned. In the distance of a hundred north. miles we met three or four stern-whoel milb in its bill, and before it recovers with modern municipal improvements of beins in its fall, and before it recovers with modern municipal improvements of from its struggle under water. The can-vasback is a peaceful, patient and well-mannered bird, as a bird of such perfect flavor should be, and instead of fighting the rascally widgeon, dives for another interval and well-flavor should be, and instead of fighting the rascally widgeon, dives for another interval and well-the rescally widgeon in the structure and well-the rescally widgeon in the structure and structure and structure interval and the structure and structure and structure interval and the structure and structure and structure is a structure and structure and structure and structure is a structure and structure and structure and structure is a structure and structure and structure and structure is a structure and structure and structure and structure is a structure and structure and structure and structure is a structure and structure and structure and structure and structure is a structure and structure and structure and structure and structure is a structure and struct

At Kinney's dock lie the Highland Light, Helicon and Geo. S. Homer, all three American vessels. The first two are ngaged, and have been for sometime; the Homer is waiting for a few hundred tons to complete cargo. Her voyage here was in the nature of an experiment. The vessel is experimental in her construc-tion, having both sails and steam, the latter motor being of use in beating around the stormy southern carge. The trip to the Columbia has not been wholly an infactory, partly owing to the delay experienced in obtaining return cargo. At the O. R. & N. dock everything was discharging ballast; the Soverrign of the Seas lightering cargo; the Imperial was about through; the Antererp was taking inst below, discharging railroad iron. Two more of the Queenstown bound fiest cleared yesterday afternoon, the Gleaper's with 60,838 bashels wheat, whi at $57,490, and the Lake Erie, with $6,566 bushels, worth $40,527. the Homer is waiting for a few hundred
