

The Daily Astorian.
 A TALE OF TWO CITIES.
 Progress of the "Vigilante" Trial in Portland.
 "Lines down" has prevented us from getting any word of the trial, and the following is collated from the Portland papers.
 The case was called in the United States District Court before Judge Deady, last Tuesday. About seventy spectators were present. The jury consisted of B. F. M. Lynch, H. C. Ringo, A. M. Shilby, Sebá Norton, W. W. Calver, M. Cunningham, Hugh Herron, A. Andrews, J. D. Artins, Geo. W. Houch, Cass Gibson and J. B. Harris. For Boyle the counsel were Messrs. Johnson, Farmer, Wilbee, and for the defendant, Messrs. Williams, Malloy, Hill and Winter.

Around the City.
 No paper to-morrow. Turkey.
 "Jeff" restaurant reopens to-day.
 The State sailed yesterday; the Oregon is due to-morrow.
 Services in the Episcopal church at eleven o'clock this a. m.
 A. M. Johnson is agent for the Thingavilla line of steamships.
 The work of driving piles for the Clatsop Mill Company's new mill begun yesterday.

Most of the stores and business places will be closed to-day, particularly in the afternoon.
 There will be an auction sale at E. C. Holden's auction rooms at eleven o'clock next Saturday morning.
 Major John L. Rogers of the First Artillery, late at Baltimore, Md., is expected by the 1st to take command at Fort Canby.
 All masters will remember that they must identify themselves to the committee before they can participate in the carnival.
 Major MacMurray, commandant at Fort Canby, came down yesterday afternoon to eat his Thanksgiving turkey at the fort.

The time of the arrival of the Portland mail boat has greatly improved lately, an improvement which is appreciated by everyone.
 An Irwaco subscriber tells of a mother that gave birth to nine little ones in one week. She is said to be a first-rate mother, too.
 The carnival this evening is an assured success, over one hundred fancy and character costumes have been engaged and will be on the floor.
 The British ship Maryshire, 1324, Cooper, master, 127 days from Leith, arrived yesterday; the Cornica crossed out; the Byrd came down; the Maid of Orleans arrived in.

Let every one purchase a ticket for the masquerade carnival this evening whether they attend or not. The proceeds are for the benefit of the fire department, and the efforts of the boys should be rewarded.
 Probabilities relative to next June's election are already being discussed. Among other things mentioned are the placing John H. Mitchell in nomination for the position that M. C. George will occupy next Monday.
 The managing committee of the masked ball this evening have spared neither pains nor expense to procure the best music and to have the seats for spectators arranged for comfort; in fact, everything pertaining thereto in first-class condition.

It is thought that there are about 100,000 cases of salmon on the river. Since the last of last April 504,300 cases have gone across the bar, this includes foreign and domestic shipments; somewhere in the neighborhood of 28,000 cases went east via N. P. R. R.
 The masked ball at the skating rink this evening will doubtless be well attended. Many who have been unable to procure costumes will want to go as spectators. The prizes will be mainly contested for. Those who have not procured tickets can get them this morning at Frank Parker's grocery store.
 The Clatsop Mill Company is about to begin the building of a new mill on the site just east of John A. Devlin's cannery. The piles are on the ground, and the work will begin next week. A new boiler will be used, together with the old ones formerly in the George Hume mill.

UNION THANKSGIVING.—A union Thanksgiving service will be held in the Methodist Episcopal church this morning at 11 o'clock. Sermon by Rev. B. S. McLaugherty. A collection for the poor will be taken. Wm. ROBERTS.
 Astoria, Nov. 29, 1883.
 A FOUR-MASTER.—Preparations are going on at North Bend for the immediate construction of another new vessel there, which it is thought will be a four-master, schooner rigged. It will be the first four-master vessel built on the coast. Her capacity will be about 600,000 feet of lumber.

MARRIAGE.—To Rev. M. D. Wilson was yesterday evening, delegated the pleasant duty of uniting in the bonds of matrimony Miss Jennie Crang, second daughter of Dr. and Mrs. F. L. Crang, and Mr. A. G. Van Dusen, second son of Mr. Van Dusen, all of this city. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's parents and was witnessed by a few members of the family and a few friends. The bride is well known in society as an estimable young lady, and the groom is to be congratulated on his success. The newly married couple left on their journey under the most favorable auspices, and have the heartiest wishes of a large circle of friends.

LIGHTING GAS WITH THE FINGER.—Lighting gas with the finger is a feat anybody may perform. Let a person, in his slippers, walk briskly over a woolen carpet, scuffing his feet thereon, or stand upon a chair, with his legs upon four tumbler to insulate it, and there he rubbed up and down on the body a few times with a tuft by a second individual, and he will light his gas by simply placing his finger to the tube. It is only necessary to take a hardware dealer who had touched anything or be touched by anybody during the trial of the experiment. The shock of electricity required by the process we have described is discharged by contact with another object. One person must turn on the gas while the other fires it.

HAD CLEANED 'EM OUT.—They're telling a story in the upper country on one of the old Linn county pioneers who went East as one of the excursionists to visit the scenes of his boyhood days, which he had not seen or heard from since he left over 30 years ago. The "old home" to be visited was in Pike county, Missouri, and the pioneer hero is an old unrepentant Democrat. On arriving at the station of his old home the pioneer asked of some bystanders who was the oldest inhabitant of the town. Directions were given him where he could find a hardware dealer who had been a resident of the village for many years. The pioneer after a short search found his man and commenced as follows: "My name is— I am an old pioneer of Oregon, having shaken the dust from this town about 30 years ago, and have not heard from any relatives since then. Do you know any people around here by the name of— After hesitating awhile, as if ruminating in the dark recesses of the almost forgotten past, the hardware merchant looked up and slowly replied: "Yes, we Yankees killed the whole d—n tribe during the war." The old pioneer made a hasty exit, took the next train bound west and reached Oregon yesterday prepared to stay there the balance of his days.

Progress of the "Vigilante" Trial in Portland.
 "Lines down" has prevented us from getting any word of the trial, and the following is collated from the Portland papers.
 The case was called in the United States District Court before Judge Deady, last Tuesday. About seventy spectators were present. The jury consisted of B. F. M. Lynch, H. C. Ringo, A. M. Shilby, Sebá Norton, W. W. Calver, M. Cunningham, Hugh Herron, A. Andrews, J. D. Artins, Geo. W. Houch, Cass Gibson and J. B. Harris. For Boyle the counsel were Messrs. Johnson, Farmer, Wilbee, and for the defendant, Messrs. Williams, Malloy, Hill and Winter.

Boyle testified that in Astoria he was working in a saloon. After the fire he was notified to leave town, but failed to do so. He was arrested and lodged in jail where he was visited by the vigilantes. They took him to their committee room, handcuffed and blindfolded him, put a stick in his mouth and stretched him up a hill. They gave him his choice of leaving town or receiving twenty-five lashes on his bare back. He refused to go, and they advised him to write to his parents, and asked him the address of his parents. They then ordered him to halt, took off the handcuffs and warned him that if he attempted to write they would kill him. They then gave him twenty-five lashes on the back.

On cross-examination he testified that when he was in Seaside, New Mexico, a party of vigilantes ordered him out of town and he declined to go, when he was allowed to remain unharmed. He told this circumstance to the Astorian vigilantes, but not to intimate that they could not drive him out. While drunk one night he accidentally discharged a pistol in Kussan's saloon. He had played poker and was about gambling houses a good deal, but denied trying to open a gambling-house about Astoria. He was known as John Jones, because when some stranger asked his name he thought it was John Jones, his business, and replied "Jones." He had never told anybody that he was a bad man. He had a dispute with a man with "Russian Bob," about a woman. Witness could not positively identify the man who had handcuffed him. He left Canada in 1878, and returned to Astoria again in 1882 for Arizona, where he had been before. On the second visit he remained about eight months. He got acquainted with many cowboys there; did not claim to be an expert shot, and had never made that claim in Astoria; had never been accused of carrying a pistol; never had any trouble with any Arizona cow-boys. In Astoria he had worked for three days tending bar, but during the balance of his residence there he was a gambler, and he thought he had never voted in this country; he had a room in the Parker House in Astoria and slept there sometime at night; he was in the company of "Sittliff" and occasionally played cards there. On direct examination he stated that he knew a man in Astoria called "Arizona Bob," but his witness was not that man. It was customary for saloon-keepers to keep a six-shooter or some other weapon under the bar, and when he was drinking bar he kept one for use in case anyone attempted to molest him.

In the afternoon J. S. Suprenant testified that he was present at the citizens' committee meeting when Boyle was examined. About six members of the committee left on special business during the meeting. Witness went on the hill where Boyle was whipped, and there were present some of the other citizens. There was one light in the party. Witness did not know whether the vigilantes were armed or not. Arriving at the hill, he saw a man among the vigilantes who had been seen by the committee about seeing Boyle with the idea that he was to be hanged. There was some talk of a rope. He was asked if he would be hanged, and he answered he replied that he didn't want to be hanged. He was asked if he had any letters or trinkets he wished to send to his family, and he answered he had none. He received no information that he was hanged. After he was whipped he was made to kneel and swear that he would attempt to injure no one present, and that he would leave Astoria, never to return. The night was very dark, with no moon. The whipping, twenty-five lashes, was done by Capt. Johnson, with a cat-o'-nine-tails. Some of the blows were light and others heavy. Boyle was bare to the waist. Capt. Johnson was selected to do the whipping because he was a seaman and was able to do the work in good shape. Witness was acting as special policeman while the committee was in session. He heard Boyle swear to injure no one present, and that he would leave Astoria, never to return. The night was very dark, with no moon. The whipping, twenty-five lashes, was done by Capt. Johnson, with a cat-o'-nine-tails. Some of the blows were light and others heavy. Boyle was bare to the waist. Capt. Johnson was selected to do the whipping because he was a seaman and was able to do the work in good shape. Witness was acting as special policeman while the committee was in session. He heard Boyle swear to injure no one present, and that he would leave Astoria, never to return.

An evening session of the court was held during which the testimony of a large number of witnesses in behalf of the defense was taken. At 9:30 the defense rested and the plaintiff commenced introducing testimony in rebuttal.
 "What Time is It."
 The lack of unanimity among the clocks and watches of Astoria has long been the subject of painful knowledge to many worthy citizens whose respective chronometers fail to agree in indicating the current hour. To find two watches anywhere within three minutes of each other is very rare and the keeping of appointments is rendered uncertain thereby. A new element has now entered into the calculation which may mean matters as far as we of Astoria are concerned. The railroads of the country have adopted a new standard of time, the operation of which affects the local time very differently. According to the new system which has recently gone into use, it is three minutes and fifty-eight seconds past twelve at New York city by the old standard when the clocks strike twelve. Further, the time changes less and less from the old standard until the meridians of this coast are reached, when the change is the other way, and railroad time is faster than the old time used to be, until by the time one gets to the longitude of this Astorian office he would find his watch were making railroad time that he would be nine minutes and fifty-two seconds faster than what might be considered standard time in the same locality. Municipality after municipality has officially recognized "the new time," and although Astoria is not yet a city, it is a railroad city, yet a due strike of the matter has been under discussion among railroad men for several years, and it was finally decided to make the seventy-fifth meridian of west longitude from Greenwich the base of the new system. If the result to us of Astoria shall be to give a set standard of time to which all tickers shall acknowledge, then those eastern railroads will have contributed something of good to our civilization, and aided all the observance of that punctuality which is said to be the "politeness of kings."

HENRY VILLARD'S MAGNIFICENT RESIDENCE.
 The Grandest Dwelling in America.
 Among the marvelous stories told of American millionaires, none is more wonderful than that relative to the career of Henry Villard. In boyhood's days we read stories of men who from poverty rose to dazzling affluence, and sprang from low estate to princely splendor, but no stranger tale was ever told than that of the poor newspaper man at $20 a week who is now building the finest residence on the American continent.
 It is situated on Murray Hill, the "Nob Hill" of New York City; was begun last summer and will occupy a site of 100 feet on the corner of Fifty-first street. Its frontage is 60 feet and its depth 100 feet. The other wing will be similar, except that it is added into the wings and is double house of itself. In the center of the court will be placed a magnificent fountain, around which will be a broad drive and a line of oaks and a lawn.

The extension of the building is more grand than beautiful. It is the result of a combination of Roman and Florentine architecture, the plans of the Cancelleria Palace at Rome and the Palazzo Vecchio being copied by the architect. The material is sandstone, the light-grayish amber-stone of which Trinity Church was built. Everything is done in mahogany, and the woodwork is satin wood or maple being noticeable. Between the pilasters will be hung rich embroidered stuffs. The predominant tones are a light reddish brown and a light yellow. The drawing-rooms and reception-rooms are so arranged that they can be thrown into one spacious apartment 100 feet in width and twenty-eight in depth.

From the reception room a hall fourteen feet in width and forty-two in length leads to the music room. A large map of the world is hung on the wall, and it is entirely in mosaic. The material is light yellow Italian marble. The floor is in Chailion marble in small pieces woven into beautiful designs. The ceiling is a masterpiece of the sculptor from an Italian design, and the whole apartment was executed by Italian artists in the style of modern French saloons. The ceiling is spanned by three semi-circular arches, in Sienna marble, with sculpture by Louis St. Gaudens. A vestibule following the same plan leads to the hall back of the drawing-room.
 The music room, however, is the chief gem of the decorator's art. It is a diminutive room, only 12 feet in length, and 12 feet from floor to ceiling, extending to the third story. It is in the style of the Francis I room of Fontainebleau Palace. The ceiling is of gold and silver, and is surrounded in light, in carved pine, surrounds the room. At one end is a gallery for the musicians. The ceiling is an elliptical vault, and every detail shows the skill of the artist. Between the music room and vestibule marble stairs twelve feet broad lead to the upper stories. Again the tone is yellow. The elevator shaft occupies the remaining space.

Across the hall are the main dining-room, a light reddish brown, and a billiard room, 23 by 60 feet in size. Carved woods again replace the marble. The room is executed in English oak, inlaid with brass, and the ceiling is divided by beams chased with English oak and the carved friezes, three feet in width, are inlaid with floral designs and inlaid with gold. The upper stories are in keeping with the splendor below, although of course not so elaborate. The general style is Italian Renaissance.
 The furniture will be especially magnificent. That of the drawing-rooms will be upholstered in colors harmonizing with the decorations. The wall designs being original, and the fittings throughout, looks, gas fixtures, carpets, etc., will be made specially for the purpose. The cost of the building, including the furniture, is an even million dollars. Of this the decorating of the drawing rooms cost $50,000; the dining rooms, $20,000; the billiard room, $20,000; and the billiard room, $20,000. As much more will be expended on other work in the latter part of a year hence. To finish the interior of Mr. Villard's house, the expenditure of $250,000. The upper floors are now about completed and the furniture is arriving.
 The structure completed will be the most magnificent residence building in the country, far surpassing the Vanderbilt houses. It is the first attempt made to reproduce an Italian palace in America. Henry Villard's house is a palace, in fact.

There was a game of poker once with two men at the table. When each piled down his little chips, as long as he was able.
 "Alas!" cried he who got the scoop. (For short, I'll call him "Banty.")
 "I'll have to see my 'uncle' now."
 "That you have," said my 'uncle'.
 "I have," said my 'uncle'.

Carl Adler's Crystal Palace.
 Among the many fine stores that our city now boasts of there is none that is more attractive in outward display, or more perfect in all its appointments, than the recently opened establishment of Carl Adler in Kinsey's brick building. Sometime ago the enterprising proprietor came to the conclusion that the time had come when it was no longer necessary for an Astorian to send money elsewhere in the purchase of fine goods, and accordingly having leased his present spacious premises he proceeded to fill it with a magnificent stock of goods, that by their freshness, actual value, and (compared with former prices) low-selling price, that any resident of the city or vicinity in need of books, music, musical instruments, clocks, watches, bijouterie, line stationery, etc., is sure to be satisfied as to price and quality.
 The main point to which the attention of our readers is directed, is that the large stock of varied goods is of sufficient size to insure you're being suited. When there is so much to choose from, it is needless to say that the variety demands to supply the popular taste, and to show that a store which compares favorably with the finest in Portland, can be successfully carried on in Astoria. His stock is complete as Mr. Adler is a credit to our growing city, and is illustrative of the progress of the community. His daily display of novelties in every line of goods is a pleasure to see. Carl Adler's Crystal Palace should be the object of all visitors to the city.

 Personalities to hear that Bill Pritchard has given the contract for his new butcher wagon to McKee & Purdy. He could not have done better, and we are glad to hear that the wagon is on its way to Clarencerville to get the job done.—April 16.
 Jottings About Town.—The new wagon for Bill Pritchard has the wheels tried yesterday at the shop of McKee & Purdy, on Main street. Jim McKee, the senior member of the firm, did the work, although Bob Purdy got the water necessary to shrink the iron.—Mr. McKee's Casual Mention.—Bill Pritchard's new wagon received its first coat of paint yesterday at McKee & Purdy's shop. The body color is a dull gray.—Mr. McKee's Editorial Notes.—We are always glad to recognize and mention any attempt at home manufactures. We have long held the opinion that the Astorian should be proud of his own goods, and we are glad to see that the business of one of our advertisers has grown to such a point that he is now manufacturing his own goods. We are proud of the fact that Whangdoole could supply a firm in the person of another advertiser to build it.—June 3.—Whangdoole Review.

The New York Novelty Store.
 There comes a time in the history of every city when special lines of business must furnish special inducements to buyers, and with this idea the proprietors of the New York Novelty store since their business first began, have kept in view the immediate necessities of the trade. The result is a rapidly increasing business and an extension of trade that fully justifies the expectations of its proprietors. The New York Novelty store keeps in stock a large assortment of novelties, such as please the eye and suit the pocket. It is astonishing, the variety displayed in the one line of musical instruments may be found an infinite collection of the smaller styles suitable to the tastes of the juvenile or adult; in the matter of books and stationery is also noticeable the selection from which one can choose, and as for toys, it would be strange indeed to find a child that could not at once suit himself and his parent's purse.
 Nor are other wares forgotten; smokers' articles in the greatest variety, playing cards, all manner of periodicals, including the leading publications of the day, are supplied in profusion, and should any book or paper not appearing on the shelves be called for, it will be readily supplied. Two stores are in operation, the one occupying the old stand on Main street, and devoted mostly to newspapers, tobacco, cigars, cutlery, etc., while in the commodious quarters located by the old I. X. L. on the opposite side of the street, is one of the most complete stocks of imported novelties ever brought to this city.
