A Sensible Letter

ASTORIA, January 10, 1884. EDITOR ASTORIAN:

The present situation and dej in all classes of business, caused by the completion of the Northern Pacific rail-road, and which was to be expected, since the immense distribution of moneys caused by the construction of moneys caused by the construction of such an immense enterprise must stimulate every artery of trade and produce inflation, presents serious questions to anyone in-terested in the welfare of our present people of all classes, as well as the roam-ing immigration.

ing immigration.

Let capital be invested in maintaining manufactories and establishing new ones. Oregon's resources are manifold, and with the completion of the N. P. R. R. we are placed on a competitive footing with eastern manufactures, and that very favorably so, in the labor markets. First, all row materials and staples re-

First, all raw materials and staples required for manufacturing are cheaper here than east.

Second, the charges on manufactured goods per railroad to be brought out place us in favorable condition.

Third, let it be known that manufactories are being established; this fact alone will bring a most desirable class of emigration, and in return will make a demand and consume large amounts of emigration, and in return win make a demand and consume large amounts of our farmers' productions, and thus again stimulate all kinds of farming on small scales, such as the newly-arrived emi-grants must of necessity resort to. In taking up new land, not one emigrant out of a thousand has more than will barely carry him through one year, hence it becomes actually a demand to have a good local market for such a farmer in order to maintain himself and prosper. Now, by encouraging manufactories to create a demand for home production, for in rain or sunshine the man who labors in some manufacturing house will have his regular meals and become a permanent consumer of our produce, the farmer again in return, if he finds a consumptive demand for all he raises, feels himself able and will encourage feels himself able and will encourage and buy the articles manufactured at home, to the fullest extent of his ability, thus hand in hand the country must prosper. Our farmers, as a whole, are yet not far enough advanced to attempt any smealation, with their preductions.

We have no railroad, we have no real estate boom, but a stendy advance in real estate and a consumptive demand for everything that can be raised by our farmers, however are today less effected than any other commu-nity in Oregon by the present depression. Astoria's manufacturing interests are to-day, unequalled in magnitude by any other city of like population in the United States.

While the completion of the N. P. R. R. will largely interfere with many branches and houses doing business in lines of imported goods, for reason of eastern competition the completion of the railroad is a direct benefit to manufacrailroad is a direct benefit to manufacturing at home, since it opens a new field for our productions.

Let every voice be raised in behalf of encouraging home manufactured goods and the capital so employed will reach its immediate reward and will not be subject to Transcontinental and Wall street manipulations, besides being productive of providing many happy mechanics with comfortable homes for themselves and families.

Yours truly,

Yours truly, EMIGRANT.

Report of the Grand Jury.

In the Circuit Court of the State of Ore gon for the county of Clatsop. To the Honorable Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for the county of Clat-

The undersigned, your grand jury for the January term, A. D. 1884, respectfully submit the following:

That we have examined into all offences brought to our notice and found indictments in such cases as seemed to us proper. We recommend that the county court provide at once some means of heating the county jail. There is no stove or other heating apparatus and the jail is consequently cold and damp, and humanity to prisoners and witnesses humanity to prisoners and witnesses there confined requires some immediate action in the matter. We find the clerk's office properly kept and the fecords and files of the courts safely cared for and safely cared for and properly arranged.

The sheriff's office is also properly kept, and the sheriff seems to perform the arduous duties incident to his office the arduous duties incident to his office with intelligence and discretion.

The county treasurer's office is also properly managed and conducted.

We visited St. Mary's hospital, where the county poor are kept, and find that institution all that a public hospital should be. The neatness and comfort displayed at this institution deserve special mention, and, naturally, we heard no composaint from any inmate in regard no complaint from any inmate in regard to the treatment received. We also recommend that more windows we also recommend that more windows be put in the county jail, and that arrangements be made for lighting it at night. All changes to be made under the supervision of the sheriff. It is necessary that water closets be provided, with water enough to keep them clean.

We also recommend that a new brick or stone county court house be built.

This one is too small and so old that it is not safe to hold the weight of a large number of persons in the circuit court

And having finished our labors we ask to be discharged for the term. R. R. COLE, Foreman of the Grand Jury.

The salmon market continues quiet. In latest advices it is estimated that the shipments from the Fraser and outside rivers will be 133,000 cases below those of last year; but this deficiency will be to some extent made up by the increased pack on the Columbia River, so that the total decrease may be taken at 75,000 to 80,000 cases. Again, as an element of strength in the position of salmon, it must be remembered that sardines are not likely to be cheap, for besides the unsatisfactory catch, the price of oil is 25 per cent, higher than last year. Also the leficiency in the supply of lobsters must have some effect on the salmon market. On the other hand, the two cargoes already arrived have only been partly sold. and holders, therefore, are their parcels.

At a public sale which was held by the Hudson Bay Company, recently, 1,760 dozen tins preserved salmon ex Labrador were all taken off at 8s 3d@8s 6d per dozen tinken off at 68 546682 6d per dozen tins (averaging 74 pounds gross weight per case of four dozen); also by the same ship, 562 tierces saited salmon at 125x@1328, with one lot at 115s per cask of 461 to 479 phunds; and 105 bar-rels of 326 pounds each at 78x@828 per barrel.

barrel. We have no change to report in salmon since our last, as prices remain unaltered; several parcels have changed hands at holders' quotations, there being no sign of weakness, and the few parcels unsold ex Ryevale are now being stored, con-signees anticipating that the turn of the year will bring an increased demand and year win bring an increased demand and higher prices.

With respect to salmon there is nothing new to report this week. The bulk of the salmon unsold ex Ryevale and Emma T. Crowell has now been moved into store, and the pressure to sell ex quay has a measuremently have removed. Another store, and the pressure to sell ex quay has consequently been removed. Another account says: The demand has practically ceased for the present, and is not likely to revive until the commencement of the new year, when, as usual, there is likely to be a steady business. The late arrivals have partly been distributed among buyers to arrive, and the remainder placed in store for future requirements. There is no weakness in the market, as the salmon placed in store for future rejuitele inquiry, and the prices realized during the past few weeks are with difficulty maintained. There is no probability of any advance taking place before the opening of the spring trade, and it is possible that the much higher prices of this season may so far reduce consumption as to prevent any further advance.—
