Not YET FOUND .- For the past few weeks Ilwaco has been enjoying the weekly visits (so it is said) of several inhabitants of the spirit land, and much interest has been manifested, even by those who were disbelievers in the charms and wonders of the seances. During one of these seances, held last week, the spirit of Charley Green, who it is supposed was murdered several years ago, is said to have been present, and informed the comp ny where they would be most likely to find his remains. Armed with this information, a small party equipped themselves with the necessary implements for uprooting mother earth, and set out the next day for the seat of engagement, at the head of the bay. It so occurred that to do the job in accordance with plans prescribed by Mr. Spirit, ground had to be broken in the enclosure of a Teutonic gentleman, and whose imagination must have been fired with all sorts of gold mining stories as the army of picks and shovels presented itself and commenced describes. those who were disbelievers in the charms mining stories as the army of picks and shovels presented itself and commenced operations. With the last ingering rays of the acting sun, were to be seen the honest toilers of the soil wending their way slowly and painfully along in the shadowy retreat of the forest kings, and when night had settled her mantle over the universe, several shadowy beings with a decidedly weary appearance, stole into town. It can be said that the remains of Sheriff Green were not found, but developments may take place that will clear up the mystery.—Journal.

> PORTLAND, Oregon, Jan. 26, 1884. Mr. E. C. Holden, Secretary Astoria Chamber of Commerce:

DEAR SIR-I take the liberty to address you this letter to inform you that I have noticed many articles in the newspapers concerning Astoria's interests in rail-roads, from which I infer that her citizens are becoming impatient for in-crease of transit between that place and other portions of the country.

It is true that the proposed railroad which is at present agitating the minds of her people would do her an immense amount of good were it constructed. Its construction is practicable without doubt, but it would require a long time and the proposed in the construction of th intense desire for quick communication with the interior and their hunger for a railroad in that direction, turned their backs toward the broad and majestic highway—the noble Columbia river which no monopoly can ever control, flowing in sublime and natural grandeur down and on toward the cosan? Have they begun to think that one of the most gigantic works of nature in the whole world should at last begin to succumb world should at last begin to succumb and yield her majesty to the puny efforts of man? On her bosom is a smooth and natural road, that never jolts nor jars; there we have no hills to climb, no moun-tains to tunnel, and it's wide. On its track trains can pass and not collide and destroy human life and endanger limbs, which, with her tributaries, reaches far away inland, where there are timber and cattle, and grain and gold. What! can eattle, and grain and gold. What! can they forsake this great artery that pul-sates through thousands of miles among fertile valleys and hills?

Dear sir, my principal object in writing is to inform you that I am the inventor of a new-fushioned, swift water-craft, operated by steam power, that can be made to travel the distance between here and Astoria in less time than can ever be hoped for for a train by means of a rail-road, and that two or three of them, large enough for general transport purposes, can be built for the amount estimated as the cost of a single mole of the proposed

I have studied and experimented on the subject for years, and am now satisfied that the invention can be made to do what I have represented, and that it cannot be used. on rivers only, but also on the ocean. I think, by its means, the distance between Astoria and Portland can be traveled, and way landings made, in two and one half hours. I am confident from results of experiments already made that it will travel at least forty miles per hour, and my experiments, as yet, have not been en-tirely perfected, and I am sure that with all parts properly finished much greater speed could be obtained.

If the chamber of commerce of Astoria, or any individuals of that city, think what I have herein said worthy of consideration, and that such an invention as I have represented would be of benefit to the place, I would be gliad to hear from them more the subject. upon the subject.

If one is wanted, two months would be

It is difficult to conceive of any possi-ble objection founded in reason to the holding of office by a single woman whose education and ability it her therefor equally with men. So also in the case of a married woman of similar education a married woman of similar education and ability, whose circumstances in life render it expedient and consistent for her to do so. This relation of women to politics will regulate itself. Thousands of men for thousands of reasons never hold office in their lives. It will be the same with women.—Clarke Co. Register.

There is no class of public officers who have been and are still so completely the spoils of politics as those of municipal government. There is no class where the need is greater for them to be controlled need is greater for them to be controlled exclusively by business considerations. The work of city officials requires in lustry, aptitude and authority unhampered by political influence. The officeholder who owes his place to ward politicians, or is ruled in his every action by the thought of how it will affect votes, can not do his work as it needs to be done. To this fact may be assembled the fact that it requires about three times as great an expense to transact the city's business as at requires about three times as great an expense to transact the city's basiness as it would to do the same amount of work in any business house in the city, and that when done it is frequently spoiled in the doing. But so long as voters deliberately set aside the best men and elect the worst what it to be done about it. the worst, what is to be done about it. Portland Oregonian.

The attorney general of the United States recently decided that post-masters were not entitled to fees from money or ders in post-offices in which money-order business was done by a clerk instead of by the postmaster in person and that such fees taken by postmasters must be re-turned. The amount of money already taken by postmasters in this way is esti-mated at from a quarter to a half million. In order to get a definite ruling in the matter, the case of General Dick, post-master of Boomington. Nothing has yet come to the surface in the senate to indicate its posisurface in the senate to indicate its posi-tion in this matter; perhaps the session has not advanced sufficiently for an op-portunity to present itself. The country will wait in patience, and if the senate does not follow in the footsteps of the house, the political guillotine will be erected for some of its members. The people are very little under party domi-nation, and they support those men for high official positions who work for their interests. Our senators and representa-tives understand the temper of the public very well, and we presume will shape their course accordingly.
