

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON: TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1884. SUFFICIENT ANSWER.

The publication in Saturday's issue of THE ASTORIAN of the fact that the Independent was mortgaged to "Russian Bob," who is its virtual owner, caused that vile and venal sheet to have a fit, and in a filthy but thoroughly characteristic manner in yesterday's issue it heaps abuse on this journal for our presumption in exposing the workings of the gang who control and prostitute its columns. Prostitution is what that band is best acquainted with; composing a corporation without capital; combined with a crew whose only creed is crime; captained by curs who cringe before those whom they cannot compel to pay tribute. Honest opposition, this journal would welcome; mainly avowed of different principles from those we hold, we would respect; but such scurrilous slanders as those in yesterday's Independent can not be imputed to other motive than malice. We do not single out the unfortunate little creature whom necessity compels to do the bidding of his masters. Our remarks are addressed to the entire gang who control that sheet; whose flag bears the one word "blackmail," and whose principles are embodied in the one word "swag." Abuse from such a source is the highest form of compliment that that outfit could tender.

The gentlemanly manner in which the editor of the Independent yesterday alluded to the fact that we were once a teacher, will no doubt be appreciated by many cultured ladies and gentlemen in this state who have occupied that honorable position. It is to us a matter of congratulation, a subject of proper pride that we have been a teacher, and if the editor of the Independent continues his research he will find that we have always earned an honest living by honorable means. Does that gentleman count equal scrutiny? Can he truthfully say as much?

The people would like to have the records show how much it costs railroad and other monopolies to buy a one-horse newspaper. As the Oregonian and Astorian may have had some experience they may be able to answer the question.

The Oregonian is perfectly able to speak for itself. As for THE ASTORIAN, we will say this much: If the editor of the Independent means to allege or imply or insinuate that the opinions of this paper are or have been an article of sale, he deliberately lies. And a man that will lie will steal.

When an alleged "editor" writes to the chairman of a state political committee, offering to sell his "influence" for coin, and some of his "bosses" are striking the leaders in the opposition camp for coin, it looks like prostitution, or it doesn't. The whole outfit would sell their souls to the devil for coin, and if he paid more than six bits for the whole lot he would be most shamefully swindled.

The San Francisco is the name of a new journal in San Francisco. The editor is Jos. T. Goodman, and if the good wishes of those who knew him when he ran the Virginia City Enterprise will assist him, his new venture will be a splendid success.

The editor of the Independent is safe from one charge: no one would ever suppose that he taught school. His lack of information concerning the rudiments of English are too manifest.

Yesterday's editorial in the Independent had one merit: it was original. There has been at least one article in that paper that was not written with the scissors.

The Independent charges us with "insulting" certain citizens of Astoria. Pray explain! When? how? whom? and in what manner?
