

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1884

MORE THAN 3000 children attend the Portland public schools.

THE house that Villard built will cost, when completed, $1,000,000.

THE Columbia and Snake rivers are free from ice and boats have resumed their regular trips.

EL MAHDI says he proposes to conquer the whole earth. It is pleasant to find one man who knows what he wants.

THE Portland News will be sold at auction next Wednesday. Here is a splendid chance for expectant politicians.

THE highest rate of postage from this country is to Patagonia and the island of St. Helena—twenty-seven cents per half-ounce.

AN attempt was made to burn the state university at Eugene last Monday, but, fortunately, the fire was discovered in time to prevent any damage.

MINNESOTA'S assessed valuation of taxable property amounts to $334,459,359. That state raised last year 33,773,200 bushels of wheat from 259,794 acres.

IT will be worth observing how the northwest communities will treat Villard when he comes out next April. Astoria has the only satisfactory record in this respect.

ONLY four states are represented in both houses of congress by natives, according to the congressional directory. These states are Delaware, Maine, South Carolina and Vermont.

FOR the last month the czar has been in such a deplorable state of nervous depression that to all intent and purposes he may be regarded as insane. He is said to be thoroughly terror-stricken, and lives in a state of panic which would be ludicrous if it did not produce such melancholy consequences.

THE king of Sweden has sanctioned the revised translation of the New Testament in that language. It will now be used in the churches and schools throughout the kingdom. In this direction Sweden has marched more quickly than either Britain or America. The version displaced was one of the best of the reformation translations.

PRESIDENTIAL gossip is increasing as the days wear by. Tilden seems to be the old man of the sea as regards the Democratic party, and there are not lacking those who say that he would be a strong candidate. The Sun emphatically denies that he wants the nomination, but as he is himself reported desirous of securing that honor, his own ideas upon the subject are at least entitled to a respectful hearing.

THE year 1900 will not be a leap year, although it is divisible by four without a remainder. In order to make a calendar and solar time agree as nearly as they can be got for many years to come, the Gregorian calendar drops three leap years out of every four centuries, and these occasions are upon such leap years as will not divide by four hundred without a remainder, although they can be divided evenly by four. The year 1600 was a leap year, but 1700 and 1800 were not, and 1900 will not be. The girls should make a note of this.

IS that interesting British ballad "The Rattle of the Daughter," it is said that the unfortunate lover of the young woman

"Cut his throat with a piece of glass, And stabbed his donkey after." This unique method of shuffling off the mortal coil was also adopted recently in Philadelphia by a railroad conductor, who, in a moment of insanity, broke a window pane, and, with a piece of the glass thus obtained, inflicted wounds upon himself whereof he died. The man who desires to quit this life is rarely at a loss for means, as the acts of suicides attest.

ONE of the natural but unfortunate effects of the common doctrine of everlasting punishment is the effect it has had in weakening the sense of moral retribution. Mr. P. T. Barnum, in a recent interview with a Sun reporter, showed this in a telling anecdote: "Putting punishment away off in a dim and indefinite future is not making much of a present influence. It reminds me of a chap who was caught by a deacon in the act of stealing a piece of silk. 'Don't you know you will have to pay for that silk at the day of judgment?' said the deacon. 'I'd no idea you gave such long credit, or I'd have taken two pieces,' replied the thief."
