The state will derive far greater bene-tis from abandonment of the effort total medits, including mortgages, than from the best endeavor it can make to enforce any law to tax them. But the vital thin, is to combel the appraisement of property for taxation at its fair cash value erty for exation at its fair cash value and to stop the system of allowing offsets on account of indebtedness. Can anything be done to secure these results. Or are we to go on forever under a system which makes to the world a beggarty showing of the property of the state which gives rise to tax levies that appal investors and send them out of the state, with stiffes industrial undertakings in may midst, and which produces the greatidst, and which produces the great tremes of injustice in distribution burdens of taxation?—Oregonian

NEWS-GATHERERS.

The Work and Wages of the Enights of Reporters in New York city are divided into three classes-fir-t-class space men, regular members of a staff and hangerson. I have known space men to make from $100 to $200 a week on the New York Herald, but it goes without saying that a man whose work is so valuable that his weekly bills for any considerable period of time average such figures, would soon be compelled to accept a salary or find he must divide his service with other papers. A good space writer, whose work is acceptable and reliable, need find no difficulty in making bills on a great paper like the Herald, ranging butween $30 and $80 per week. Of course, if he were industrious and personslly a favorite, there is no reason why he should not make half as much more on the Sun or the Times, but I find upon careful investigation that the average space man is very well contented with a steady and certain income of $50 per week on any of the leading papers. There week, but they are rare, probably not more than five in the city. Good staff men range from $30 to $50 a week, and it is understood that staff men are to do no work on any other paper. This rule does not apply to space men, although there are at acned to each New York newsare at acceed to each New York news-paper space men was are to all intents and purposes on the staff. They have desks in the offices, they are expected to look in regularly at the hours of assign-ment to duty, and generally be at the beek and can of the city or managing editor, according to the nature of their nuties.

No honest, intelligent reporter need be No hinest, intelligent reporter need by a hanger-on, unless he so prefers. A hinger-on is a man who is plut by space, out is not recognized as a regular attache. Le is a man who makes $5 or $50 a week, according to exigencies or opportunities. Now, these three classes of reporters, occapying many grades of intelligent influence and income, this a majority of the columns of all the newspapers published in america. They do the gay and festive, the sad and solemn. They and festive, the sad and solean. The picture with glowing pen the beauties of a ball, and paint with sombre brush the dirges of a funeral; they see incoming steamers for earnest intelligence; they give a sketch of the gnastly morgue; give a sacces of the ginaxy morgue; they attend the president across the Brooklyn bridge or rush with policemen to extricate the wounded from a collisio; they make one of the damp and dam I party on the outside of an humble vullage, waiting to display in characte is at terms the efforts of a Sullivan and a Santa. They seem hours, in the Stade. They spend hours in the gloomy recesses of fle comptoner's office seeking the sources of "coapon frants." They watch the acting of an irving or take down the utterances of a laimage. From the discovery of a foundling in a basket on Mr. Somebody's devices a through on Mr. Somebody's doorste, s, through every walk of life until the closing of the grave upon the dead, the reporter paints, pictures, pencils, si etches, describes everything known to human existence. Reporters aiffer in many ways. Some Reporters differ in many ways. Some are rarely descriptive, in some a bump of humor is magaincently diveloped, some permeate a story, scort or long, with indices of personality. Others are castiron in recital, and make their stories as piquant as en algebraic problem. A good reporter, gifted with normal spirits and health is a tining of beauty and a joy forever in any well-regimeted newspaper office. Every door is open to him, and the field of life is spread before him with its sunshine and mandow. In the course of an evening he talks with presidents and walks with princes, he presidents and walks with princes, he sits with the sorrowful and mourns with the humble. In church to-day, in jail to-morrow, merrily dancing with Arion this evening, deep down in coal pits with striking miners some other evening. Now he interviews a magnate of the land, and now takes the dying deposition of a outchered thief. Part of an evening is spent in the cathedral fair, part in a political meeting, part in police head-quarters, part in the debtis of a railroad collision. No place is too sacred, none too lowly, no man is too high, too rick, too great for him to approach, none too poor, too humble for him to serve. He is as much at home in the palace of a millionaire as in a hospital ward of a prison. He writes with equal readiness the gab utterances of a befrilled bishop and the harrowing confession of a poor devil in the Tombs. A good reporter must be discreet. How much he hears he cannot tell, how much he knows it would not be fair for him to reveal. He was the less and worst types of secrets. sees the best and worst types of society, and has his hand more constantly upon the pulse of affairs than any minister, awyer, doctor, or merchant. The work of the American reporter speaks volumes daily for itself. Now and then one is deceived and misled, fooled; but by men at large, from Maine to G.o.gia, from New York to Oregon, the American reporter holds his own in the in eresting, the instructive and the entertaining.

Our editorial newspiper men can very readly be disposed of. The day of isms readily be disposed of. The day of isms nasvery largely gone, and they are really never great in the field of discussion. As white plamed in ghts, they are of no sensi use. In the early days of Bryant, breeley and the great entorial lights east, when abolition, free soil, free speech and a thousand and one closely contested governmental questions were at hand, by which one sat while the other must necessarily stand, there was opportunity secessarily stand, there was opportunity for distinctive, unmistakable utterances now, with the exception of the tariff, there is nothing for people to discuss in which there is involved the faintest degree of principle, and the consequence is hat we have no great editors. The average reader understands an editor to be an who writes on the editorial page, and it is in that sense that I speak. Technically there is but one editor to a newspaper, and he is the responds head of the whole concern, but it has become image to dign f, men who write on the editorial page with editor. Much of the ditorial page with editor. The ditorial page wit necessarily stand, there was opportunity for distinctive, unmistakable utterances now, with the exception of the tariff, se of opinion expressed. Indeed, so far is utility and influence is concerned, sineteen-twentieths of the matter printed aineteen-twentieths of the matter printed aight just as well never have been writien. Enditorial writers in New York reseive from $25 to $300 per week. I beseive there are two in this city who reseive $300 a week, quits a number whose unnual salary is $1', 00, many who reeive $5,000, and a great many more who tverage $50 a week.—Jo. Howard in Boson Herald.
