There is nothing so delicious in the fish line as salmon, and when prepared as our line as salmon, and when prepared as our cannerymen alone know how, it is beyond compare. These remarks are suggested by the experience of a prominent canner on the river who last season put away several cases of his own brand for winter consumption, and who used it all winter in preference to eggs of uncertain age, and other combustibles. Murat Halstead, editor of the Commercial Gazette, Cincinnati, reviews the riot in that city in the following dispatch to New York: The number of persons killed and wounded in the riots thus far is about 200. The last fatal shot fired in anger up to this time, was fired between 4 and 50 clock yesterday morning, though a poor soldier boy was killed last evening by the accidental discharge of his gun. The court-house is not an atterrain, as it was at first supposed to be. A large proportion of the valuable records were saved. The money that was in the treasury is all safe. The vaults, which were very heavy, are mainly good. We have confidence that there will not be a repetition of the three nights riot that will be so memorable here, but only the overwhelming force of state troops prevents further disastrous demonstrations. The determination to lynch a gang of murderers, in prison and release a crowd who have been made prisoners, is something terrific. Secret meetings were held yesterday that would mean mischief if there were not thousands of rifies and several batteries at hand. The excited people had real griev-ances to begin with, for the administration of criminal law has been damnable, and the limituence of sheer criminals in tion of criminal law has been damnable, and the influence of sheer criminals in public affairs alarming. #### Rosenberg's Superior Lacquers.

Mr. W. E. Waters, representing D. Rosenberg & Son's celebrated lacquers, at present a guest at the Occident hotel, has a large shipment of their goods to arrive within a week, and their lacquers can be had in lots to suit through John W. Hume of this city. Mr. Waters says that their lacquers furnished this season contain a much larger percentage of urpentine than beretofore, and, although they do not sell it for turpentine lacquer, they are convinced that it contains as much turpentine as the article sold by others as a pure turpentine lacquer, at a much higher price. They have improved much higher price. They have improved the quality so much that all competitors are sway behind them in point of excellence, and they are ready to demonstrate this to the packers on the Columbia river. The question of danger of their lacquers compared with others was carefully looked into by them prior to shipping this year's supply, and they have absolutely found their's safer than the so-called "pure turpentine lacquer" and other brands now on this coast. In point of color-spreading qualities and durability, they are way ahead of all others, and they are not imposing upon the packand they are not imposing upon the packers by charging an outrageous price for an inferior article called turpentine lacquer. Fair dealing and superior value invariably wins in commercial contests. The price of their improved lacquer this season is $1.75 per gallon here, and as season is $1.50 per gation nere, and as they require nearly two gallons of tor en-tine for reducing, it makes the cost of the mixture ready for use, at the present price of turpentine, about 59 cents, "and don't you forget it." The question of any lacquers being endorsed by the board of underwriters is erroneous, and anyone stating that such is the case has been, to say the least, misinformed. These lacquers, reduced with spirits of turpen

In an hour from that time Smith's account was sent in, amounting to $50. "Buff," called out the merchant, "how much is our bill against Smith's "Just $40, sir." replied Buff. "Ah, I thought so. Make out a new bill, itemize and add ten per cent to the price of those goods, rising the whole to $55 odd." Then, seeing the look of astonishment expressed by the clerk, Mr. Blim resumed: "Remember this, Mr. Buff—always make your creditors send in their bills first! It pays."

STATE AND TERRITORIAL NEWS.

A Chinese bank, with a capital of $400,-000, will shortly be opened in Victoria by a Hong Kong firm.

It is said that a small bed of natural oysters have been discovered on Hood's Reports from the seal fisheries in the neighborhood of Cape Flattery indicate that the vessels engaged have met with very gratifiying success. On the 1st inst., the Hudson Bay Company disposed of its last piece of property in the southern part of Victoria. They formerly owned the whole town site.

The Oregon wool clip this year will be far above the average of other sessons. It will also be much superior in quality, owing to the good condition of the flocks. There is some talk in Olympia of holding a mass meeting to request Delegate Brents to push that $10,000 appropriation through for the improvement of Olympia harbor.

Several years since a lot in Albina was bought at sheriif's sale for delinquent taxes, for $5. The original owners have commenced suit for its recovery, as it is now worth about $250. As the time allowed for redemption has expired, the present owner feels confident he cannot be discovered.

Two vessels now on the Pacific coast will have different masters on their return trip. Captain Baker, who brought out the Henry Villard to Tacoma, has rethe Henry Villard to Taconsa, has re-signed his mastership and in a week or ten days will leave for his home in Bath, Maine. Captain Perkins, master of the ship Mount Washington, now lying at Portland, takes command of the Henry Villard, while E. K. Baker, son of Cap-tain Baker, and now mate of the Henry Villard, takes command of the Mount Washington.

Priday afternoon the North Seattle

Friday afternoon the North Seattle school house building narrowly escaped destruction by fire. It appears that one of the workmen engaged in tinning the dome left his soldering fire where it reached in some way the wood work. Soon a flame several feet in height leaped by The situation was most critical; the up. The situation was most critical; the distance from the ground made it exceedingly difficult to get water. But after a very little time a bucket brigade was formed and soon the flames were extinguished. The building was fully insured.

William H. White has been selected by the citizens of Seattle as a delegate to represent King county and western Washington territory at Washington in the matter touching the forfeiture of the land grant to the Northern Pa inc Railroad company in that territory. The sum of $7.50 has already been subscribed by the people of Seattle toward defraying the necessary expenses of the delegate. One thousand dollars it is estimated will be sufficient and the remaining $250 will soon be raised. Mr. White will leave for Washington on Thursday.

To reduce the grade to 100 feet to the mile on the Natchez route for the Cascade division of the Northern Pacific road, would require the building of 18 bridges over that stream. This route as surveyed gives the grade at 116 feet to the mile. The Stampede grade is only 36 feet to the mile. The estimated cost of the Cascade division has been place by Villard at $9.000,000 or $10,000,00 and $8,000,000 is his lowest estimate. Surveys have been in progress for the last twelve years, and there may be some doubt if at this time they are satisfatory. One or two surveys over the Blue mountains sufficed to establish the route to Baker City and the engineering diffto Baker City, and the engineering diffi-culties were fully as great as those to be encountered on the Cascade line.

The Luck of Howland & Aspinwall. It is curious and a study for us who keep going forward while occasionally we glance backward, to recall the travel hither in the early days and to contrast it with that of to-day. Howland & Aspinwall, the most noted and most enterprisfic upon this coast upon the acquisition of California by the United States and the definite settlement of the Oregon question, and were quick to engage with the government for the building and running of four large ocean steamships, to voyage between Panama and Astoria. Oragon, and make stoppages at the inter-mediate ports of Mexico and California-leaguico, Mazatlan, Guaymas, San Die-go, Monterey, and San Francisco. There was no idea of gold deposits or gold dis-covery in California at that time. The enterprise was purely and simply based upon the conviction on the part of the great merchants that this coast was destined to become one of the richest and most important in commercial rank, and, sooner or later, to command a great share in the trade of China, and measurably of the Indies. Three of their steam. ably, of the Indies. Three of their steam-ships, the Panama, the California, and the Oregon, were launched before the discovery of gold, and not until these had sailed from New York to take their places announced in the sast. Then, as though copper was instantly made gold, the enterprise of Howland & Aspinwill—organized into the original Pacific Mail Steamship company—suddenly sprang into a condition of enormous riches and automatical interprise of the state of th into a condition of enormous riches and surpassing importance, greater than it had expected to attain through years of yenture and toil, of careful management and masterly ability. It was the most profitable steamship line in the world. The steamships had been built in the best manner, so equipped as to serve as was vessels in the event of their need as such by the government, and their cost war in excess, therefore, of the ordinary steamships of the merchant marine of that period. But great was the cost, the net earnings of each of the three more than paid it all during the first nine months of 1849. And this rich traffic continued through the succeeding four or five years.—Jas. O'Meara in April Overland.

A DEED WITHOUT A NAME.

The following from the San Francisco News Letter of the 22d ult., is the latest concerning the subject of the flattering sketch who bilked so many Astorians while here:

Charles A. Bayley, Jr., is rapidly working himself into an unenviable notoriety. This wolf in sheep's clothing lately attended a man in his dying hours. Turn about during the short intervals of recuperation from a state of mandlin drunkenness, this ghoul and one or two others of the same stamp, attended, or rather presumed to attend, on the last the wants of this unfortunate. The last thoughts of this man of letters and r. thoughts of this man of letters and r.-finement, as he opened his eyes and gazed on his surroundings ere he closed them, disgusted, in his final sleep, may be more easily imagined than expressed. Hardly had the curtain rung down on the order to be enabled to vote at the city delection. The Statesman adds: "There must be some hurrying up done, as this number cannot possibly be one-half the legal voters of the city."

Several years since a lot in Albina was bought at sherin's sale for deinquent taxes, for $5. The original owners nave somenced suit for its recovery, as it is low worth about $2500. mediately constitutes timeself a commit-tee of relief and visits the numerous friends of the deceased, who respond with alacrity in the sweet name of char-ity. With bleary eyes, from which the crocodile tears streamed, this fraud pro-ceeded from office to counting row from counting-room to store, and in not a single instance did he meet refusal.

The obsequies proceeded in due form, and the remains were followed even to the grave by this individual, who contrived to make himself conspicuous by his eager haste to place on the grave flowers purchased end brought by others. After the funeral naturally came the bills for expense incu red, but the money, where was it? Demand after demand has been made on Bayley for the balance of the moneys collected, but so far it is not forthcoming, and the rumor is that on the night after collecting the funds the fellow was so overpowered with his feelings that a stimulant in the form of a poker game was the dernier resort. Rumor also he is it that as the spirits rose the funds fell, and when Bayley arose he Rumor also his it that as the spirits rose the funds fell, and when Bayley arose he was poorer, if not wiser, to the extent of the balance which remained unpaid of his collections. That this individual should have used the guise of charity in the attempt to feather his own vile nest is not averaging when we take into conis not surprising when we take into con-sideration the fact that the hand of justice is already on his shoulder for stealing, and that before long he will be taken hence to Portland to answer to the charge. This should be a warning to the charge. This should be a warning to the frequenters of his den on Clay street. The fate of their old comrade stares them in the face. Many respectable men no doubt unwittingly patronize his resort in ignorance of its inner workings, its unsavory reputation for gambling, and in other ways. A man who adopts the foregoing method of making money is not to be trusted, and should be ostracised. A highway robber is a gentieman class. A highway robber is a gentleman in comparison with such a sneak-thief. Of him indeed may be truthfully said in the language of the poet:

"With one hand he put A penny in the urn of poverty, And with the other took a shilling
