about twelve o'clock last evening se living in the vicinity of Trulr's mill were startled by the report pistol and cries of murder and for Several persons hurried to the from whence the words came and found a man whom Mr. Trullinger recognized as Julius Fraser, who has been in his employ as fireman for several months past, lying close to the well in front of onse, and helpless from the effects of a shot in his side. When the wounded man became sufficiently composed he stated that he had been down town in company with James Reeves who has been employed by Mr. Trullinger as engineer in his mill, and that he was trying to induce Reeves, who was considerably under the 'influence of liquor, to go home. When they had got almost opposite Reeves house, keeves became fractions, and, fearing injury. Fraser tried to get away from him and ran past Trullinger's house down to the mean house just beyond, when Reeves gave up the chase and started back, Fraser following after to the well, where the shooting took place. It was impossible to find out exactly how the trouble occurred at the well. After the shooting Reeves went to his house, and in the meantime Fraser was taken to the office of the West Shore mills. Dr. Baker was sent for and the police summoned. Fraser had been in the office but a few minutes when Reeves came back and found him there, and drawing his pistol, threatened to shoot him again, and was with difficulty retrained by those guarding the wounded man. Reeves then went back to his house and resisted all attempts for his arrest, threatening to shoot anyone who house and resisted all attempts for his arrest, threatening to shoot anyone who approached. Additional police force was eant for and in the meantime he slipped out of soms unguarded way and went down town, and while on his way back to his house again was arrested, and a Smith and Wesson's five shooter and dirk knife were taken from him, after which he was lodged in the edity jail.

ness in being stingy; the charitable are happy in the consciousness that the recipients of their charity are grateful; the uncharitable are happy in the belief that that which they might have spent in charity is still their to use in some way which they believe to be more conducive to him above others that are mentioned. On the Democratic side there seems to Involve man, the in some way that Republican hearts in Oregon warm to him above others that are mentioned. charity is still their's to use in some way which they believe to be more conducive to their happiness, each one seeking happiness in his own way. Of course, to the man who preaches prohibition it seems singular that his neighbor should find happiness in an occasional glass of cold tea, and yet to that neighbor it doubtless appears as singular that his prohibitionist friend should find his happiness in endanyoring to shyidge the rights of those deavoring to abridge the rights of those who don't agree with him. The monk in his cell finds his happiness in the life of a recluse and looks with abhorrence upon the life of a davotee of fashion; to compel both to exchange places would result in mutual misery, while each following the bent of his own inclinations

Fraser was taken to the hospital, and at half-past one was paralyzed in his lower extremetites, spitting blood, and apparently suffering intense pain. The doctor fears that the ball which entered the left side near the sixth rib may have passed through the lung and lodged in the spine.

Toung Republicans.

Some very young Republicans and a few older ones met at the hall of Astoria Engine company No. 1 has evening in answer to an alleged call. Mr. F. J. Taylor was elected president and F. L. Parker secretary. Mr. Taylor had the "eall" was lotted that it was in order to find out what the meeting was for. Mr. A. F. Johns asked for information relative to the purpose of the meeting, and suggested that in his judgment it was in title premature. C. W. Fulton stated that the kinew nothing of the matter till he arrived on the swening boat from Portland. C. J. Curtis said that some one had suggested that it would be all right. Capt. Hustler thought that it was a little premature. C. W. Fulton stated that the convention adjourn to May 26, which was carried, and the procession filed out.

The Telegraph Used to Bleed Confiding

"Any message here for me?" brusquely inquired a man of the young gentleman at the delivery window in the telegraph

"No, sir," said the young man without asking the name of the inquisitor. "Yes, there is; I know there is a dispatch here. You will oblige me by look-mother was so worked up over the mishap to her son that she came all the way from Boston with the money instead of sending it, as desired. She found her son hale and hearty, living upon expectations of what he was shortly to receive from home. A more disgusted woman never lived, and, as the young man aftertward explained to me, she went away with all the money she had brought, and a very bad opinion of her son, in whom she had placed great confidence.

"Then there is the young man who is continually going into business. One apprace young fellow here is the idol of a fond, old and rich uncle, who lives in one of Philadelphia's suburbs. According to the dispatches to his uncle he is engaged in business in a dozen different places in Colorado. His losses are made good by frequent drafts upon the old man, as he calls him. His drafts are always accepted and paid, and the proceeds go over the gaming table. The young man thinks it great fun to work the old man, but young day his methods will be exposed, and then we shall lose one of our regular customers.

"The majority of the telegraphic of the calls him and the proceeds go over the grant function of the telegraphic of the majority of the telegraphic."

"The money invariably comes along in a day or two. The way in which these women impose on their vi tims is a wonder. Their dispatches are sent to prominent men in all parts of the country. It may, perhaps, be a mild system of blackmail, but it is effectually carried out and evidently pays."

DEATH OF MRS. WHIPPLE.-On Friday last Mrs. Charlotte A. Whipple, wife of Mr. S. R. Whipple, breathed her last at her home in this city. She had been an invalid for the past fifteen years, and the last eight months' of her life she was confined to her bed, suffering from parconfined to her bed, suffering from paralysis. Some time since all hope of her recovery was abandoned and death came as a happy release from her sufferings.
Mrs. Whipple was born in Sussex county,
New Jersey, June 21st, 1822, and was married in November, 1849, at Chicago, to S.
R. Whipple. She crossed the plains in 1832, and has been a resident of this county ever since, living in Vancouver 21 years. The funeral services took place at the Methodist church in this city on Sunday and were largely attended. Rev.
H. K. Hines, of Portland, delivered the discourse on the occasion, and the rediscourse on the occasion, and the remains were buried in the city cemetery.
