Beeves, who, since the shooting of Frazier, has been confined in the county jail, was yesterday taken to the hospital where the wounded man lies, to hear the latter's deposition, Before the testimony was concluded Frazier grew so weak that it was continued until this morning. Frazier is completely paralyzed from his hips down, and it is the opinion of attendant physicians that it is but a question of time when the unfortunate wan shall breathe his last.

Literature Newspapers

It has often been asserted that the finest and most beautiful sentence in the English language is the opening sentence in Dr. Johnson's "Rasselas." "Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy, and pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope; who expect that age will perform the promises of youth, and Furnishing goods, Boots and Shoes, etc., that the deficiencies of the present day at cost, without reserve.

C. P. MOFFIT. will be supplied by the morrow, attend to the history of Rasselas, Prince of Abys-

This is indeed a beautiful sentence; but to the mind of the average newspaper publisher there is a far more beautiful one, which should read: "Enclosed please find $2 in payment for one year's subscription to The Webell Astorial." The "phantoms of hope" and "deficiencies of the present day" more often assert themselves in the mind of the publisher than do the beauties of a well rounded centence.

Literature and the struggle for the necessaries of life go constantly hand in hand. There are comparatively few of the standard works in literature which nade their authors immortal but have made their authors immortan out that were written under the most adverse sircumstances or in fighting againt bitter poverty. Dr. Johnson is said to have written his "Rasselas" during the nights of one week and in order to defray the expenses of his mother's funeral. While of one week and in order to defray the expenses of his mother's funeral. While under the attending circumstances and the beauty of the work this might be called a wonderful achievement, yet there are numerous cases where the work performed by many an editor on the dailies of the country far surpasses it. But the times have changed, and the newspaper writer of to-day is expected to go through work and to produce articles at short notice which a century ago would have made his name immortal.

Dimmitt's Cough Balsam cures Croup Children all like Dimmitt's Cough Where the Missing Screw of a Binnacle Lamp Was Found.

Speaking of chickens picking ap and swallowing diamonds, "chispas" of gold and other bright bits of stone and metal has reminded Judge —, of this city, of an experience with a chicken at sea.

In June, 1860, he made the trip from Mazatlan to San Francisco on the French Groceries. bark Surprise. One day, when about half way up the coast, the steward had out the binnacle lamp and was engaged in cleaning and polishing that bit of nautical apparatus. He had it on the deck, and had taken it all apart, and had the debris, wreckage, or whatever you would call it at sea, scattered all about.

The vessel was rolling slightly, and as it rolled it caused a brass screw about half

TROPICAL AND DOMESTIC an inch in length to travel down the deck. Some chickens were loitering about, and the flash of the screw caught the sight of an old hen. She dashed at the bit of brass and in a moment it was the bit of brass and in a moment it was in her crop.

The judge saw the transaction and inwardly chuckled, as he knew there would soon be Davy Jones to pay about that screw. When the steward had polished up the lamp and was putting it together again he missed a particular and important screw. After searching for the screw for some time in vain the steward scale. for some time in vain the steward spoke of his loss to some of the sailors. They joined in the search, but no screw could be found. Soon the attention of the captain was attracted to the group of searchers, and the steward was obliged to tall him of the loss.

captain was attracted to the group of searchers, and the steward was obliged to tell him of the loss.

The skipper flew into a rage at once, and used much profane ianguage in commection with the frequent reference he felt called upon to make to the steward's eyes. The poor steward was on the point of taking a ride on the toe of the captain's boot, when the judge thought it time to appear upon the seene. He told the captain that if he wanted the screw it could be found with but little trouble. He had only to order one of the men to catch an old black hen that he pointed out, cut off her head, open her crop, and the screw would be found.

At this the sailors gazed upon the judge as though they thought him some practitioner of the black art, and the steward gave him an appealing look, as much as to beg him not to join sides with his persecutor.

The captain had the fowl caught at once. Its head was cut off, its crop was opened, and out rolled the lost screw. Sailors and all on board were astounded, and even the captain changed color. The face of the steward showed a queer mixt.

Sailors and all on board were astounded, and even the captain changed color. The face of the steward showed a queer mixture of delight and awe.

After that bit of legerdemain the steward could find nothing good enough for the judge, and when the wind failed he heard hints among the sailors that they might have a ten-knot breeze any time they wanted it provided a certain person aboard should see fit to give it them.
