

The Daily Astorian.
 ASTORIA, OREGON:
 SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1884
 BODILY LOCATION OF HUMAN HAPPINESS.

Dr. B.W. Richardson, in the Asclepiad, treating of felicity as a sanitary research, observes: "The center of the emotion of felicity is not in the brain. The center is in the vital nervous system, in the great ganglia of the sympathetic, lying not in the cerebro-spinal cavities, but in the cavities of the body itself, near the stomach and in the heart. We know where the glow which indicates felicity is felt, and our poets have ever described it with perfect truthfulness as in the breast. It comes as fire kindling there. No living being ever felt happy in the head; everybody who has felt felicity has felt it as from within the body. We know, again, where the depression of misery is located; our physicians of all time have defined that, and have named the disease of misery from its local seat. The man who is miserable is a hypochondriac; his affection is seated under the lower ribs. No man ever felt misery in the head. Every man who has felt misery knows that it springs from the body, speaks of it as an exhaustion, a sinking there. He is broken-hearted; he is failing at the center of life; he is bent down because of the central failure, and his own shoulders, too heavy to be borne, feel as if oppressed by an added weight or burden, under which he bends as though all the cares of the world were upon him to bear him down."

Commenting on this the Lancet says that, in other words, felicity is a physical result of a brisk and healthily full circulation of blood through the vessels supplying the ganglia of the great sympathetic system of nerves; and whatever quickens and at the same time frees the flow of blood in these vessels particularly, engenders the feeling we call happiness. This is the fact, and we believe it explains the action of many articles of food and medicine and medicinal appliances. It, moreover explains and confirms the truth of the maxim which we have so often recommended for general adoption: "Be briskly, not languidly, joyous if you would be well." This is the converse of the doctrine that happiness is an affair of the heart and stomach. A comfortable, as contrasted with an austere, mode of life is the most natural, and therefore the healthiest and the best. We sometimes wonder why those who live by rule, and tremble as they live, laboring to eat and drink precisely what is "good for them," and nothing else, are so weakly and miserable. The cause of failure is that such persons are over-careful; life is a burden to them. They have no "go" in their mode of existence. One-half of the "dyspeptics" we see, and whose sufferings we are asked to relieve, would be "well" if they were only "happy." Everything in life and nature acts and reacts in a circle. Be happy, and your sympathetic ganglia will have the blood coursing through them, with the bound of health; and this quickening of the pulse, if it be produced by "good cheer," whether at the table or on the mountain side, will, in its turn, produce happiness. Felicity is the outcome of a physical state, and that state is itself enhanced by the sort of cheerfulness which often consists in being happy in spite of circumstances.

The proposition to pay the Irish national members of parliament is an advance step on the part of Mr. Parnell and his followers in their struggle to obtain home rule for Ireland. One of their great difficulties is not to find men who are competent to discharge the duties of a member of parliament, but to find men who can afford the expense and upon whom they can at the same time depend for an unwavering support. A paid parliamentary delegation is a new idea in English politics, and will, of course, be sneered at by the organs of the landlord and moneyed classes. The Irish in this country will be the heaviest contributors to the fund for this purpose. It is already large, and now that the appeal for subscriptions has been publicly made it will in all probability assume very handsome proportions. It is a sacrifice on their part in behalf of liberty and freedom which all right thinking Americans will commend.

GEORGE M. ROBESON, whom the New Jersey Republicans ungratefully refused to send to the Chicago convention, says that he could write a book quite as interesting, although perhaps lacking the literary finish of Mr. Blaine's famous volume. He asserts that in the early hours of the Hayes administration he was virtually president, as the head of the navy, and before Mr. Hayes took the oath of office publicly on the 4th of March he had been secretly sworn in by the chief justice. "If the Democrats," says Mr. Robeson, "had possessed backbone in those days they might have put Tilden in." The ex-secretary of the navy should by all means sit down and write his book. His party has tied his hands during the coming campaign and served notice on him that he is of no further use to it. Let him turn historian. What a delightful history of the navy he could write.

The senate at Washington has settled the important question that the commissioner of agriculture is, in virtue of his position, entitled to go on the floor of that body while the grave and reverend legislators are in session. The farmers all over the country will rejoice over this concession to their interests. All the crops will, no doubt, be greatly benefited. The winter wheat will grow at least an inch when it hears the news, and when the peas, the corn, the potatoes, the beans and the tomatoes are planted they will strike root at once. The consideration on the part of the senate for the farming interests of the republic is exceedingly touching. What a calamity it would be if the senators had decided not to allow Commissioner Loring into their august presence while they were deliberating on the affairs of the nation.

People along the Northern Pacific railroad hope to get a water supply from artesian wells. At Miles City water has been found at a depth of 341 feet; at Billings, 150 miles further up the Yellowstone, a well has been sunk 900 feet without success, and is still going down, and at Helena there is more experimental boring.

The Maryland constitution requires legislative bills to be signed by the governor and the presiding officer and clerks of both houses, all in the presence of each other, and the five met at Annapolis the other day and made 307 acts into laws at one sitting.

It is calculated that there are now residing in the United States nearly 1,000 Japanese, and of this number it is said that not one has ever been convicted of any criminal offense in an American court.

More than 1,000,000 head of cattle wintered in the territory of Wyoming, and the general "round up" of this enormous number will begin about the middle of May.
