AROUND THE CITY.
 W. W. Cole's circus will be here about July 10th.
 Straw hats begin to show which way the wind blows.
 The Oregon is due this morning. The Columbia sails for San Francisco.
 County Treasurer Heilborn gives notice concerning the payment of county orders.
 Judge Fox makes announcement concerning his candidacy for justice of the peace.
 The A. E. Field leaves Main street wharf for Tillamook at eight o'clock this morning.
 The Grand Encampment of Oregon begins its session last evening, and closes to-morrow evening.
 If you have any idea of being a candidate this time, now is your last chance. The entries close to-morrow.
 Work progresses on the Astoria and Coast Transportation Company's new steamer. She is to be in the water by July 3d.
 The present session of the Grand Lodge I. O. O. F., lasts three days. An excursion is the leading feature of to-morrow's programme.
 Regular communication of Temple Lodge, No. 7, F. & A. M., at Masonic Hall this evening. Sojourning brethren cordially invited.
 Ten million artificial teeth are manufactured in this country every year.
 Well, what of it! There's ten times that many natural ones produced every year.
 A petition is being circulated and numerous signed asking the postmaster general to discontinue the mail service between here and Seaside. A daily mail between the two places has become a necessity.
 J. O. Bozarth, school clerk district No. 1, was yesterday distributing assessment blanks for the current year. He desires to sight no one in this matter and should any taxpayer be missed he or she can get one by calling at his office.
 The Astorian welcomes the 150 visitors who, with their sisters and friends, are here from the hills of eastern Oregon, the slopes of the Willamette valley, and the fertile fields of the south, and hopes that their sojourn in the "city of the future" may be a source of joyous satisfaction to them, and of permanent prosperity to the great order that they so worthily represent.
 The regular Hill matinee was on in the police court yesterday afternoon. The principal performers in the farce were the same as before. "Trial by Jury" was the piece selected. It seems to be the intention of the city council to give every man in the city an opportunity to get on the jury and give his verdict as to the obstinate and expensive folly of the city in keeping a play running that the people are getting tired of seeing and the gentlemen of the council! There is a woful lack of sense and dignity in your present course!

What might have been a most serious accident occurred here Sunday evening in front of the Empire store, by a wheel coming off from one of the upper town coaches, which was passing at the time. The coach was overturned and the passengers piled in a heap, greatly to their consternation. Fortunately no one was hurt. The ludicrous part of it was that as the wheel left the axle it came bounding along and struck the sidewalk, bounced over it and was immediately pushed away by a man in whose road it lay. The wheel simply turned around, as if it imbedded with life, started back the man again. He, turning around, saw it coming for him, and skipped in haste away.
 What has become of all the stories this year! The girl that fell dead from jumping the rope; the snake that split a cord of wood; the snake that was cut open and twenty-seven hen eggs dropped out and were put under the old hen and healthy hatched; the Eagle Cliff bear that lost two toes in '83 and three toes in '84, and was v-ted in '85; the man near Ilwaco that thinks he knows where the buried treasure is; the message from sea; the legend of the Clatsop road that they were once going to build; the ordinance about building a street in the street; the Indian who dies every day and comes to life every night; the two-headed calf; the five-legged dog; the headless rooster; the sea serpent; the deserted vessel, and all the rest of the fables. The season is, indeed, backward.

THE PRICE OF CANNED SALMON.
 ASTORIA, OREGON, May 19, 1884.
 ED. ASTORIAN:
 Meyer, Wilson & Co. and Balfour, Guthrie & Co., are now soliciting consignments of salmon, or rather if they are not soliciting consignments are trying to get the canners to engage freight room to get their vessels for Liverpool and London. If the owners ship salmon over shore, they will never find Meyer, Wilson & Co. or Balfour, Guthrie & Co. buying a sign of it, for when Wm. T. Coleman & Co. sold salmon all the way from $1.28 down to $1.30, in 1883 and a little lower than that for export, last year every one thought it was very low and the market fell lower and until the canners on the river who consigned salmon to England got their returns and found it netted them all the way from $1.40 to $1.17 1/2.
 Now England will require 250,000 to 400,000 cases of salmon this year and she will pay good prices for it, if the canners will just stand firm, keep their salmon in their ware-houses and canneries and make England come to us as she did in '79, '80, and '82 and former years. But there is no use to think of consigning salmon or putting it on board vessels expecting to sell it after it is on its way to England. Such a course would simply be suicidal.
 Yours respectfully,
 Wm. T. COLEMAN, CANNER.

THE GRAND LODGE OF OREGON.
 The Twenty-ninth Annual Session of the I. O. O. F.
 Three weeks ago the Independent Order of Odd Fellows throughout the union celebrated the sixty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the order. The occasion was made the means of eliciting considerable information regarding the order, which has grown from six members to over 500,000; which has a yearly revenue of $6,000,000, and which extends over $2,000,000 a year in the relief of its members and their families.

Since that date there have been different sessions of grand lodges throughout the country, the most notable on this coast being the session of the grand lodge of California, which met at San Francisco last Wednesday, when the corner stone of a new Odd Fellows' building to cost $300,000 was laid with all due ceremony.
 It is but a short time ago that the corner stone of the finest building in Astoria, and the largest Odd Fellows' hall in the northwest was laid, and in that hall meets to-day the twenty-ninth annual session of the grand lodge of Oregon, represented by the following members:

Perhaps no better example could be given of this age, its purpose, progress and practice, than such a gathering as that which convenes in Astoria this morning. Here are men from every nook and corner of Oregon, men who represent all classes, creeds and conditions; and however they may differ as to politics, religion, or any other question, they come together as brothers, as protectors of the widow and the orphan, as dispensers of a common bounty, as guardians of the society's funds, with but one purpose, and that the fostering and advancement of the principles of their order, the trinity of humanity's teachings—FRIENDSHIP, LOVE AND TRUTH.

STATE AND TERRITORIAL NEWS.
 Orsterville is to have a lodge of A. O. U. W.
 Eighty-eight degrees in Portland last Sunday.
 The Ilwaco, Shoalwater and Gray's harbor railroad company will levy a five per cent assessment to begin work.
 Walker and Soule have sold their logging business on Fork's prairie, Pacific county, W. T., to J. D. Rhea, for $3,000.
 Money is getting easier in Seattle. A large sum was obtained last week at 9 per cent, and $60,000 more is now being negotiated for at the same rate. It is San Francisco capital.
 There is at present eighty-six saloons and groceries in Seattle. They yield a monthly revenue of over $100,000, and $2,000,000 more is now being negotiated for at the same rate. It is San Francisco capital.

Erma Meeker the veteran hop grower, informs the Astorian that the yield of the White river valley would, in his opinion, reach 1,000,000 pounds, and the Pyralist as much more, making a total of 3,000,000 for King and Pierce counties. Regarding the prices likely to rule during the present year Mr. Meeker thought it unlikely that a rate higher than 30 cents per pound would be obtained. Some of the hop fifteen cents had been made, both on Puyallup and White rivers, a figure which would make fair margins for careful, experienced producers. The most of the hop crop will be shipped his hops from the yards to London, he having secured most favorable rates for through transit. The farmers of King county should receive for their hops $250,000, and of this there should be at least $45,000 clear money. Mr. Meeker is also becoming a producer of potatoes to a considerable extent, expecting to market some 7,000 bushels the present year. His hop crop will yield 160 tons. He cultivates 160 acres.

Lanark of the Iron Railroad Ferry.
 The monster iron transfer boat for the Northern Pacific Railroad company, which was brought out here from New York in sections and put together at the yard of Smith Bros & Watson, was launched yesterday forenoon. No public announcement was made of the event, and so only about 200 persons, friends of the builders and workmen, were present. The keel of the huge boat was laid only two months ago, and the most sanguine had no idea that she would be ready for launching in so short a time, but the continuous fine weather has enabled the work to be continued almost without intermission.
 All preliminaries having been arranged at a few minutes past 10 o'clock the workmen commenced knocking away the sheaves and blocks beneath the boat. This work occupied half an hour, when word was passed, "all clear aft," "all clear forward," and the long hull was held in place only by the ropes hanging around the ways. A man was stationed at each of these armed with a keen eye, and at the word of command the lashings were severed and the huge structure weighing over 1,000 tons glided quickly and smoothly into the water. She was welcomed by a chorus of whistles from several steamers which lay off in the river, and in response sent a mighty wava rolling to the sky, which tossed them around like corks. Two tugs made fast to her and she was towed to Albina where her machinery will be put in.
 She will begin her regular trips to transfer the trains of the Northern across the Columbia at Kalama, but as the Kalama section of that road is not in use, it is not certain where she will be employed. She will be used to transfer trains here, and may transfer trains from here to Kalama, and thus save unloading and loading cars. She is 338 feet in length, 49 feet breadth, and has a draught of 6 inches breadth over all, and 13 feet 6 inches depth of hold. She will have three tracks on her decks and is capable of transferring twenty seven cars at once.—Oregonian, 15

THE ODD FELLOWS' MARCH.
 I saw in a distant city,
 Far over the pathless sea,
 A scene in the days of my boyhood,
 That will always seem grand to me.
 I beheld a vast column approaching,
 Their banners half clouded in dust,
 And I read in the pure folds when sighted,
 Our motto, "In God we Trust."
 I beheld, as the column moved onward,
 In the ranks both the young and the old,
 Arrayed in their garments of splendor,
 Their regalia of crimson and gold.
 There marched the Prince and the Peasant,
 Methinks I can see them now,
 As they marched to the soul stirring music
 With the knights of the anvil and plow.
 There came an old man bearing hard on his staff,
 He must have passed three score and ten,
 His withered limbs and his wrinkled brow,
 How I wish I could see him again;
 He bowed to the throng, to the right and the left,
 He was pleased with his chosen lot,
 And he seemed to say as he passed me by
 "Forget it not," "Forget it not."
 They wore on their breasts strange devices,
 Crossed gavel, crossed axes and keys,
 The pen, the sword and the hour glass,
 And fresh blossomed rose from the shield,
 And one carried the bow and quiver,
 Another the serpent-twined rod,
 Designed to cramp the human soul,
 And all its best emotions freeze.
 Carried proudly the volume of God.
 A beautiful banner waved high in the rank,
 Decked with emblems both brilliant and bright,
 Near the top were three golden links,
 And the heart and the hand to the right.
 Near the top of the staff three arrows were twined
 Above them a young turtle dove,
 In a distant city and a foreign land,
 Where his grave with true friendship is
 In every city and in every clime,
 Throughout this whole land's broad domain,
 Told with the power of prose and rhyme,
 Is heard the old man's refrain,
 And thousands of banners are waving high
 With twining arrows and beautiful doves,
 And thousands of hearts with each other vie,
 To bless the order of Truth, Friendship and Love.

WHAT IS, IS BEST.
 BY MRS. AZALEA E. OSOOND.
 (Written for THE ASTORIAN.)
 If we could trace the course of life
 And still escape its salient fire;
 Could hold ourselves aloof from strife,
 Or yet ignore each new desire.
 If we could be on constant guard
 And judge alone of what we saw,
 When human acts our watch reward—
 What would our speedy verdict be?
 Would it not be prosaic quite,
 Or, what is worse, of egotist turn?
 Should we not even take delight
 In sarcasm? Should we not spurn
 Our fellow creatures one and all?
 Since scanned by cold unfeeling eyes,
 In our esteem each one would fall
 Nor should we even question why.
 Such was the fact—but only deign
 To give expression to disgust,
 Or at the best deem those insane
 Who were inclined to take on trust
 A vow, no matter how sincere,
 Of friendship, sympathy or love;
 Since that would all to us appear
 The sentiments which weakness prove.
 Nay we should count the first sweet bliss
 That overspreads the maiden's face
 When first she notes the vivid flush
 Her lover wears—a keen disgrace.
 We should prate over of control,
 And theorize on "new ideas"
 Designed to cramp the human soul,
 And all its best emotions freeze.
 No smiles our sanction would receive
 Save such as smile at our made;
 In policy we should believe,
 And actions which plain truth evade.
 All natural impulse must be checked,
 Else we had not our duty done;
 And hence produced the "fine effect"
 Of selfish aims and tutored tongue.
 A wise aristocratic world,
 Our hobby it would be to see,
 From whose proud heights be swiftly
 Each vestige of simplicity.
 And if all this could be achieved,
 No doubt great credit we should take,
 For what our "sound minds" had conceived;
 Ah—sage reformers we should make.
 If nature had not well disposed
 Within each heart a cunning spring,
 Which sometime touched—at once dis-
 A tiny cupid—on the wing.
 Or else, perchance, a hidden well,
 Of kindly feeling deep and pure;
 Sufficient quite to trath impulse,
 Pure noble charity insure.
 Far better that we should have known,
 The uttermost of poignant grief;
 Than that we ever should discern,
 The sympathy that lends relief.
 Thank God we cannot have our way,
 But must submit to higher plan;
 Thus reaping blessings day by day,
 Through "Man's humanity to man."
