ABOUT THE CITY.
 Pacific Lodge, No. 17, K. of C., give a grand ball next Friday evening.
 Lintner & Co. have 300 cords of bark that they want carried to their tannery.
 Reserved seats for Kate Castleton's performance at the New York Novelty Shows.
 "For goodness' sake don't say I told you." At Occidental Hall next Wednesday night.
 Drawbacks, bills of lading, salmon and shipping blanks of all kinds at THE ASTORIAN OFFICE.
 Kate Castleton and Rice's Surprise Party will be here next Wednesday. Look out for them.
 The Columbia Canning Co.'s missing boat was picked up on the weather beach yesterday afternoon.
 C. E. Wood, formerly Lieutenant 21st Infantry, now a member of the Portland bar, is in the city.
 The Grand Encampment, L. O. O. F., concluded its labors last evening. The Grand Lodge will close to-morrow.
 An especially large edition of this morning's Astorian is printed, that parties wishing to preserve Mr. Roberts' address may be supplied.
 The Beda and Oregon arrived in yesterday from San Francisco, and the Columbia started toward the harbor bar, which at the time was morning.
 All resident and visiting Odd Fellows, their families and friends are cordially invited to the social gathering at Occidental Hall this evening.
 Rev. Wm. Roberts' address is published this morning, which completes the report of the entire proceedings of the Pioneer and Historical Society at its late meeting in this city.
 An excursion to the cape, and a complimentary ball on the evening at Occidental Hall, are among the items on the programme for the entertainment of our visiting friends to-day.
 When the Oregon came in yesterday it was supposed that she would make a longer stay than she did. About thirty of her passengers were left here by her sudden departure for the interior.
 What promised to be a serious runaway last evening was checked by the merciful courage of Tom Linville, the driver, who grabbed the lines and "stayed with" the team, till after running for three or four blocks the horses quieted down.
 The Astorian has concluded that a steam engine of the latest and best make of running off its daily and weekly editions and will this week put in a new motor, an Otto silent gas engine, the latest perfected mechanical appliance for supplying power.
 "Your busy city surprises me," said a representative Odd Fellow yesterday, himself a man of large business interests. "I had no idea Astoria was half so large or that it did near the business of which I see so much evidence on every hand. It is with considerable reluctance I started from home, for I had no knowledge of the place, but I am delighted with the city, its people and the way that we have been received, and shall, henceforward look with considerable pleasure toward renewing my visit." And that is about what they all say.

 During the winter of 1847 and 1848 the legislature was called at Oregon City to devise measures for carrying on the war. Money was needed to send a messenger to Washington. The superintendent of the Methodist mission was appointed to carry $1,500 to aid in the emergency. Jesse Applegate (noble man that he was and is) was the commissioner in the case. I furnished the money. Please remember these were trust funds, not my own money, and there was no security, none whatever. It took some courage to handle the money then, for we lived by faith largely in those times.
 With the events of the several wars with the Yukimas, the Rogue rivers, the Modocs and the Nez Percés, you are familiar. What, with these several wars, together with the discovery of gold in California, never forgetting our own civil war, for we were many times within a few hair-breadths of outbreak in our own midst, it has been a difficult task to keep the water line of morals up to the point of the early provisional government. We once had a prohibitory liquor law here, before it was in Mexico, but we got it, and there must be some grand work done before we can reach it again. Please remember, my young friends, your parents and predecessors were men of iron frames, of iron frame, of hardened sinews, and of iron hearts. There rise up before me the honored features of Jason Lee, Marcus Whitman, David W. Bates, and others. A. F. Walker, and of honorable women not a few. I am reminded of an incident related by Dr. C. H. Fowler:
 Bishop Ames was invited to share the carriage with the military review in Washington at the close of the war. They had a favorable position viewing the procession, together with the soldiers marching by. There rumbled the field artillery; there crowded by the light cavalry; there tramped the unwearying infantry. At one time there passed a brigade of regulars, and the day-guards in uniform clean and beautiful, every bayonet and sword polished and gleaming. The drill was perfect, and the music was sweet and cheerful. Every motion and look bespoke the soldier. As they marched by, the bishop turned around to Bishop Bates and said, "Fisher, those men can whip the devil!"
 So it seems to me the heroic men who have settled Oregon could well say, "world, the dead and the devil." I do not like to hear anyone say these men entirely failed in the work they came to accomplish. It is not true; they were successful. Mistakes have been made in Oregon, no doubt. Among others the following. I think it was a mistake to set too high an estimate on the value of the mission property at the Dulles. The business should have been settled twenty years ago; but some persons in New York overvaluing our claim, much to our regret, held it out for sale. It was sold for more of the original transactions than any man now alive, and fully believing in the equity of our claim, I am of the opinion a mistake was made, not here, but in New York.
 That noble son of Mars, Major General Canby, together with Rev. Dr. Thomas, lost his life in the lava beds in northern California, and his body lies in Modoc bay by a mistake—trusting to the honor of Captain Jack, the rascally Modoc chief.
 When the leader of the noble 600 at Balaklava, immortalized in song, led his band into the valley of death, he quietly observed, "Somebody has blundered." Having learned from one of the four corners of the world that General Canby was to be assassinated if they went unprotected to hold that council with these treacherous Indians, he looked for a moment at his rights they would to commissioners from the court of St. George or St. James. I ask my friend Dr. Cabaniss, now before me, why did Canby and Thomas and Mosnier and Dyer and their brave men, who were with the guns of their men. Orders from Washington, he replied, was the explanation. Now, I doubt if any living man knows the real story of the matter, which cost the lives of two grand men, than Dr. Cabaniss, who was present, arranged for the meeting, and nursed the wounded Modocs back to life again. Too much importance was attached to treating with heathen rascality. A costly mistake.
 Some of you came to this country to teach. There was much need of our just as there is in all parts of the union. You have taught geography until everybody knows that the United States is bounded on the west not by the Atlantic ocean, but by the Mississippi, nor Rocky mountains, but by the Pacific ocean, and the great American desert is sunk into Symmes hole, or into nothingness. You have taught engineering. It is no longer a mystery to a farm wagon freighted with an apple orchard, and pear and peach and plum and cherry trees and all manner of fruit, can cross the plains and mountains, and the iron horse and his magnificent train, and doings. You have taught something of mathematics. The whole is greater than any of its parts. The great American government is greater than any single one of its states. The lad who enlisted in Louisville, Kentucky, and marched south for ten days and still camped in Kentucky, and his father said, "If the United States is bigger than Kentucky it is awful big," has since learned some geography and some mathematics. Some men are studying sociology and history very closely. This, when reduced, its last analysis includes among others, the value of the longest pole in relation to the person and the length of his shadow, just as long upon who saps with the devil. vast amount of labor has been performed, governmental, educational, reformatory, religious. I represent a church (and it is but one of several churches) that has done fifty years of missionary preparation and thirty-five years of conference labor, and had up to 1876 gathered into the church from the world 16,000 persons on trial as church members. I wish to add my testimony in this important fact: Oregon belongs to the United States largely, if not wholly, in consequence of missionary enterprise. It is scarcely conceivable a more difficult task than that which confronted Jason Lee and his associates when they reached this country fifty years ago, and fully realized the situation. The base of supplies was practically 20,000 miles away, and a long time was required to give or receive advice. The ground was occupied by a powerful foreign company, extremely jealous of America, ready most unwisely to checkmate any and every step that would look toward American settlement. If these missionaries showed their confidence obtained from the American secretary of war it only confirmed the suspicion that after all it may only prove a skirmish line, thrown out to buy time, and to open the way for a final conquest of the English traders, from a very profitable traffic with the natives. No sufficient supplies it was seen could be obtained for American settlers from the stores of the Hudson Bay company. It was therefore a necessity for the missionaries to furnish themselves with supplies and also their neighbors. The great good received with the great reinforcement in the Louisiana in 1840 decided the easy possibility of American settlement. The industry of Dr. Whitman to Washington in the winter of 1842-3, and his influence in aiding and encouraging the emigration of the following season, ultimately decided the nationality of this north-west coast, and thus Oregon became the property of the United States, with a population of Indians as a standard, while in England a population of 200 to the square mile means a town, or a mine, or a factory, in India some agricultural districts rise to 800 to the square mile. That would give us 3,800,000 about three times the present population of the globe.
 Swing into the future as far as the landing of the pilgrims is in the past, and this continent would hold and feed twice the present human race. Of the thirty-seven years spent on this coast, seven years were spent in the preparation given to the circulation of the scriptures, the other thirty years to the inculcation of his hallowed truths. It is quite likely that what he visited with Russian nihilism, German communism, and French socialism. We do not need them, any more than Douglas Herold's duck which you had a shower. We have the word in the bible, and we shall cling to it so long as "righteousness exalteth a native and sin is a reproach to any people."
 But these desultory remarks must close. The historian Macaulay found reason to suggest that in the possibility of the future some noble being might stand on a broken arch of London bridge and sigh over the ruins of Westminster abbey in that grand city, should the time ever come when the vast commonwealth of which the northwest coast forms a part shall be overturned, and some future shaller voyaging the ocean in life centers on his log "such to-day." The dismantled hulk of a once noble vessel of state; name and history unknown. It will be because the fathers and mothers of our children have failed to baptize them with prayer and the fear of God.
 We have an opportunity here to build a noble structure. Over in India, you recall the golden crown that sits on the forehead of the Veda; there is a cenotaph on the banks of the Jumna. It is most beautiful and wonderful, ordered to be erected by the great ruler at Delhi, Shah Jehan. The Taj stands on a marble terrace thirty feet high, and is built of white marble. The dome, shining like a dome of silver, is seventy feet in diameter, and is finely decorated. The dome is 27 feet from the terrace. The whole of the Koran is inscribed in black marble on the outside and in precious stones within. It is difficult to conceive its richness. Among the wealthy you may find diamonds and rubies of a few grains weight. But wrought into this wonderful structure are 570 pounds of opals, and 404 pounds of rubies, and 3,840 pounds of emeralds, and 37,840 pounds of sapphires. Add to this 20 tons of carnelians, 20,000 pounds of turquoise, and 37,840 pounds of lapis lazuli, with 125 tons of agate and onyx, and the mind is lost in the immense value. Sixteen millions of dollars were paid for material for the building of this structure. Its finish is most delicate and a breathing, spiritual beauty is everywhere seen. The white marble walls are inlaid with diamonds and emeralds and rubies on white satin. Thirty-five kinds of carnelians are used in a single flower of a caratation, and in one blossom not larger than a dollar twenty thousand different stones. Surely, this was planned by Titans and built by jewellers. It stands to-day, the monument of India, the most magnificent and spacious park. It is a worthy human ambition to work one's life into such a structure, even though it is only a tomb. Others as I look at this building rises up before me. Its park is the northwest coast. It is terraced up by vast mountain ranges. Its borders are washed by a magnificent ocean. Its fountains and reservoirs are rivers, lakes and inland seas. The materials for this edifice are gathered out of all lands. The great body of its walls and columns are made of marble, and the first found in the North Sea. This is in aid with a trifle of black marble from Africa. Then come the treasures from every country and city under the stars—the large-brained German with his industry; the long-headed, open-faced Scot, with his broad plan and enduring purposes; the sprightly, artistic Frenchman, with his love of life, and his enduring Slav, from awakening Russia; the witty, hopeful son of Erin; the free born, hardy, life-loving men from the mountains of the sprightly Japanese; the unceasing Chinaman; and from all lands and from all isles of the sea, they come and are wrought into this temple of liberty. Up and down all its sides, and over all its wide acres, inwrought by the faith and patience of the saints of to-day, you can read the full gospel of the Son of God, while standing beneath the archway, the apring Japanese, the unceasing Chinaman; and from all lands and from all isles of the sea, they come and are wrought into this temple of liberty.
