SUNDAY MORNING ITEMS. But seven days remain in which to vote the state.

G. A. R. memorial services at Congregational church this evening.

There were several private parties at Alderbrook and elsewhere yesterday.

Chaplain Scott will preach at the Baptist church at 11 A. M., and 7:30 P. M. to-day.

Gasol service at the Y. M. C. A. hall at 2:45 this afternoon. Everybody welcome.

Has the Clatsop road project gone glimmering through the dreams of things that were?

A complete dictionary of the Chinook jargon is received from J. K. Gill & Co., publishers at Portland.

If the party who writes regarding the exorbitance of shipping charges will send his name, his communication will receive attention.

There will be divine service on board the British bark Jessie Jamison, lying at Kinney's dock, at 4 o'clock, Rev. J. McCorne officiating.

Some of the Republican candidates chartered the Gen. Gaster yesterday afternoon and went to Knappa, returning at an early hour this morning.

The Clara Parker carries excursionists to Young's river falls and back to-day for fifty cents. Will leave Main street wharf at nine this morning.

The board of school directors of school district No. One, opened three bids yesterday for the old schoolhouse. Mike Meyer bid $150; H. B. Parker, $125; J. M. Holson, $115.

Since April 1st, '84 to date, 6,000 cases salmon have been shipped overland via N. P. R. from Astoria. The shipments to San Francisco are not up to last year's figures.

The steamer J. Mendel went to sea yesterday. The second mate looked out at the last minute and concluded he'd stay here, so made a plunge from the side of the vessel and is reported to have got ashore.

Otto von Geldern, formerly engineer on the Columbia bar, and well known in Astoria, has written a letter from Berlin, dated May 1, saying that he has been in Germany for several weeks. He expected to traverse France, Italy and England. He adds, "It's nice in Germany, but give me America in mine, every time."

The delegates returning from the grand lodge at Astoria are lead in their praise of the treatment they received from the Astorians. The general verdict is that they were well. J. S. Keller says he gained several pounds of flesh during the trip, and he has a mind to sell out here and move to Astoria for the benefit of his health. Next year or two there would probably build him up considerably.—Oregonian, 24th.

Cushing Relief Post No. 3 was organized last evening with twenty charter members. The following ladies were elected officers of the new organization: President, Mrs. Laura Thomas; senior vice president, Mrs. Mattie E. Cooper; junior vice president, Mrs. Sarah J. Clinton; secretary, Mrs. C. E. Ross; chaplain, Mrs. Elsie Nichols; treasurer, Mrs. Kate Robb; conductor, Mrs. Annetta Whitcomb; guard, Mrs. Mary L. Parker. The corps will have its regular bi-monthly days of meeting the same as Cushing Post No. 14, G. A. R., and starts under the most favorable auspices.

G. A. R. Services. HEADQUARTERS CUSHING POST, No. 14, DEPT. OREGON, G. A. R., ASTORIA, OR., MAY 25, 1884.

In accordance with the orders issued from Headquarters, Dept. of Oregon, G. A. R., Cushing Post, No. 14, will attend services in the Congregational church at 7:30 o'clock P. M., May 25, 1884. Visiting comrades are requested to meet the members of the Post at Headquarters thirty minutes previous to the time of holding services.

By Order: Post Commander, Sacramento Salinas.

Attention is being directed to the deprecations committed on salmon by the seals and sea-lions. Especially is this the case with the fish that have to run the gauntlet of the monsters guarding the Golden Gate. Over and over again the fishermen of the Sacramento river have netted a collection of heads and tails, proving that the seals follow the fish up the bay into fresh water. The consequence is that some of the canneries have been obliged to shut down owing to the scarcity of material, while the price of salmon is going up. The question that will soon have to be decided is, Shall the state protect the seals or salmon?—Chronicle.

THE BETTER HALF OF HUMANITY.

Almost every fashion magazine contains articles on physical development and personal improvement, and while perhaps the strictest adherence to rules and most careful attention to instructions on "how to be beautiful" would fail to accomplish the desired result, yet without doctored face and figure could be improved, if not perfected, by giving heed to the advice of those who have made the laws of health and the consequences of disobedience a life study.

The figure—height and breadth and shape—is the work of nature, which may be improved but not altered. The perfect size for a woman is five feet three inches in height, one hundred and twenty pounds in weight, with a twenty-two-inch waist, and a thirty-two inch bust, and this proportion is supposed to be maintained whether a person be larger or smaller.

Another—and simpler way of understanding is this: A string that will go twice around the trunk should go once around the wrist; thrice around the wrist once around the neck; twice around the neck once around the waist; twice around the waist once around the shoulders, over the arms. Much can be done for a figure in the way of dressing, not by squeezing in one place and pulling out another, but by a proper exercise of common sense.

Too much flesh can be reduced by denying the flesh to gratify the eye. Lack of flesh and rounded curves can be attained for by study trimmings and carefully disposed draperies. Long arms must have rather short sleeves with deep trimmings; short arms, long sleeves with narrow cuffs; long necks, high ruffs; short necks plain collars.

Long-waisted women should wear dresses with pannes, while short waists require seemingly lengthened by long pannes. Much ornamentation on the front of dresses, such as large bows, buckles and buttons, should be avoided by women already very wide from arm to arm, though some ruffles and wrinkled fronts for dresses tends to diminish rather than increase a noticeable bump.

Now that the season is mentioned second because sculptors, painters and poets say that a fine figure is more desirable than a pretty face, though every woman knows the contrary. The first great desideratum is a pure complexion, not more pink and white prettiness, for dark skin is frequently the most attractive; but it must be clear, free from freckles, moles and pimples. Of all cosmetics of face, there is none, perhaps, which comes nearer producing the effect claimed—that of removing tan, freckles and roughness—than the secret of the front French beauty, but never discovered and published for the benefit of weather beaten femininity. It consists of a mixture of pure olive oil, white wax, lemon juice and camphor gum, rubbed into the skin thoroughly and repeated as often as possible.

Great care should be taken of the nails, that they be kept delicately clean, royal and well trimmed. In slavery days the nails were a matter of importance, as persons having the slightest admixture of negro blood never have any onyx in their nails; hence the little moon in regard to a proof against the slightest suspicion of "tar-brush."

There is a woman would resent an intimation that she did not know how to wash her face, yet such an assertion would not be barren of truth. Very cold water should never be used. It stops up the pores and causes indigestion, leaving the face "shiny" and burning. It is also a mistake to expect to cleanse the skin without soap; naturally oily, it collects dirt which, if not entirely removed, causes the necks called "black-heads," and by some erroneously believed to be small worms. These are removed by cloths wet in water hot as the face will bear, to be replaced as fast as they cool, until the oil is melted, when they will disappear. Many muddy complexions are due to indigestion, for which simple medical treatment is required. French character is fine powder, taken a tablespoonful in molasses three mornings in succession, followed by some mild cathartic, will clear the skin beautifully.

Now comes the hair, which with many women is a source of annoyance rather than a "crown of glory." The color is a matter of little importance, though many evidently think differently, as it is authoritatively stated that in America there are over three hundred patients in the lunatic asylum whose diseased brains were first injured by various coloring and bleaching processes. While many ex-haunted women have written on the care of the hair, one dresser asserts that the same result can be attained by any one who for one year will each night give their hair one hundred strokes with the brush, and use cold water and lime. There is a process for preserving the color and luster of the hair known as "singeing." It consists of passing a comb through the hair till near the ends, then holding it off. It is said to hermetically seal the ends of the hair, prevent the leaching of the marrow, and thus preserve its health and vigor. The mode is in vogue in several tonyorial establishments in the east, but it is too new to be seriously recommended. The greatest latitude is now allowed in the style of dressing the hair, though every one is advised to guard the change of the head and face before adopting any certain fashion. Thus, a woman with pointed chin and receding forehead must not pile her hair on the top of her head, nor one with sharp nose and a "deer-knob" diametrically opposite. The ear is a noticeable feature which it is not possible to change, but at least it may be large and red, good taste should teach a woman not to let her hair cover up and behind them, pushing them into view, nor yet hang conspicuous rings, no difference how valuable, in the ill-shaped lobe. A large, scooped-out ear may be "masked," and slightly grotesque, but the observer is apt to forget its virtues and only remark its ugliness.—Vegeta in New Northwest.

THE PIVOTAL STATES.

The number of electoral votes this year is 401, and 202 must therefore be obtained to elect a president. How a considerable majority of these votes will be cast may be calculated with reasonable certainty at the start. That is to say, we know that certain states are fairly sure to go Republican and certain other states equally sure to go Democratic, regardless of what may or may not occur between now and November. The two parties are so nearly matched in this respect, however, that each figure gives little indication of the result of the election.

Allowing to each party the number of electoral votes that it can count upon with ordinary safety, the final result is still in doubt and dependent upon the action of states not included in the estimate. The advantage is on the side of the Republicans, but the margin is a small one and justifies very little boasting; the difference in their favor being not over nine votes at most in a total of nearly 200.

It may be assumed, in a general way, that the electoral votes of the following states will be given to the Republican party: Colorado. 3 Nevada. 3 Illinois. 22 Nebraska. 5 Iowa. 13 New Hampshire. 4 Kansas. 3 Oregon. 3 Maine. 6 Pennsylvania. 30 Massachusetts. 14 Rhode Island. 4 Michigan. 13 Vermont. 4 Minnesota. 7 Wisconsin. 11

Total. 151 There is a possibility, of course, that some unforeseen and sudden change of sentiment, or some sinister local complication, may swing one or two of the smaller of these states to the other side; but such a contingency is not probable. The votes named are practically secure for the Republican ticket; and in addition to them, 51 more votes must be won in other states to achieve the victory.

The Democrats claim, and may properly be granted, the electoral votes of the following states: Alabama. 10 Mississippi. 9 Arkansas. 7 Missouri. 16 Delaware. 3 North Carolina. 11 Florida. 4 South Carolina. 9 Georgia. 13 Tennessee. 12 Kentucky. 13 Texas. 13 Louisiana. 8 West Virginia. 4 Maryland. 8 Total. 142

The Republicans have a fighting chance in Florida, and a remote hope in West Virginia, but they are not likely to carry either of them as matters now stand. It is an uncertain saying that the Democrats, that the Democratic party will get all of these states; and it must accordingly gain 60 more votes in other states in order to elect a president and compass the control of the government.

It follows, then, that the election must be determined by the seven states which have the remaining 109 electoral votes. In the election of 1880, four of those states cast 89 of these 109 electoral votes, were carried by the Republicans. The same luck this year would, of course, make triumph easy and complete. But the conditions are somewhat different now, and these states are all more or less doubtful. Their electoral votes stand respectively as follows: California. 8 New York. 36 Connecticut. 6 Ohio. 23 Indiana. 11 Virginia. 12 New Jersey. 9 Total. 109

There is little room to believe that the Democrats can carry either Ohio or Connecticut. The chances are in their favor for New Jersey and Virginia, perhaps, and possibly in California, in fact carry New York, on the other hand, the drift is unquestionably against them, and the Republicans ought to secure both of these states, and will do so if they are wise and prudent.

If we give the Democrats New York and Indiana, in addition to the 142 votes considered certain, they will still lack nine votes of a majority. California or Connecticut alone would make up the required number; but New Jersey, New York, and Ohio and Indiana, if it would be necessary for them to get Virginia and two other of the doubtful states; California, Connecticut and New Jersey would not answer the purpose without Virginia, and Virginia would not do with any one of the states of New York, Indiana, and Virginia would bring them success, but New York, Indiana and any other single state of the doubtful ones would not. If they lose either Ohio or Indiana, they must carry New York, or be inevitably defeated; for all the other doubtful states together would give them but 58 electoral votes, when they must have 69 to win.

The Republicans, on the contrary, can succeed without New York if they carry Ohio, Indiana and any other two of the four states of California, Connecticut, New Jersey and Virginia. With New York and either Ohio or Indiana, they can triumph without a vote from any of the other states in question. This is certainly a much more promising outlook than that which the Democrats have to face. It is not so felicitous, however, that any blunders or experiments can be afforded. At best the contest is bound to be a close, sharp and uncertain one, and every vote will be needed to insure the triumph. The preference of a majority of the people is undoubtedly with the Republican party; but to make that preference active and effective, there must be no mistake made and no extra risk assumed as to candidates. All personal considerations will have to be subordinated to the interests of the party as a party, and a ticket put in the ballot, acceptable to the strong, and equally acceptable to the weak.

STATE AND TERRITORIAL NEWS.

John Atwood, aged 18, was drowned at La Center last Tuesday.

The first extension over the Northern Pacific railroad left St. Paul last Wednesday, and will arrive in Portland tomorrow.

On Wednesday night, says the Walla Walla Statesman, Sergeant Burke of L. Co. company, first cavalry, while posting the relief, dropped dead without a moment's warning.

The working force about the locks at the Cascades is small at present. There are a few stone cutters facing up rock, some engineers and surface men awaiting the more of congress in the matter of appropriations. The canal and cut for the locks are well along, and a lift of about $150,000 or $200,000 now would be just the thing.

The interest, says the Oregonian, in regard to the use to which the iron transfer boat of the Northern Pacific railroad is to be put is that she is to run between Columbia City and Kalama. It is stated that the boat will be put in at Columbia City, the Kalama branch ballasted and put in running order to that place, and cars for the Sound will be transferred here, run down to Columbia City and transferred thence to Kalama. This plan will, if carried out, give Columbia City quite a boom.
