PRICE, FIVE CENTS.

ENO'S RASCALITY.
Drawing a Check for $90,000 After Confessing to an Embezzlement of $4,500,000.

The Boston Transcript says: We are permitted to quote the following from a private letter received in this city from New York, which throws considerable light on the inside history of young Eno's knavery in the management of the affairs of the Second national bank:

Young Eno saw that he had wrecked the bank, and made a clean breast of the matter to his father on Sunday. The shock to the old man was a terrible one and his anger knew no bounds. He consulted with several of the directors, and they examined the securities in and the books of the bank, and found that the president had sunk $3,000,000 of the bank's assets in Wall street. Nor was this all. He had made way, likewise, with a million and a half in securities deposited in the bank by his brothers and sisters and even his little nephews and nieces! Amos R. Eno, when he discovered these facts on Monday and Tuesday, was completely overcome by the baseness of his son's crime, and from the first was for having him arrested and punished as severely as the law would permit. It was all the other directors could do to divert his mind to the bank itself. They pleaded with him not to allow the bank to be closed, because of the suffering that would be caused to the hundreds of depositors. Finally his anger toward his rascal of a son gave way to pity for those who had trusted the officers of the bank, and he consented to make good a portion of the sum his son had embezzled. His first offer was $1,000,000, but this was not enough, and again he declared that he would see his son in prison before he would pay any more. But the arguments of the directors prevailed, and he contributed out of the savings of a long and busy life enough money with the few hundreds of thousands which the other directors supplied, to cover the deficiency and make the bank solvent.

Well, the bank on Wednesday morning was declared solvent, and the work of paying creditors before the agents Mr. Eno, Sr., and one or two of the directors were in the bank, and they thought that their troubles were in a measure over, when another dramatic incident occurred, and for a time the fate of the bank hung again in the balance. This was nothing more nor less than a check for $90,000, which John R. Eno had drawn on the bank, and which he had got cashed down after he had confessed to an embezzlement of $4,500,000 to his father. This was the climacteric of impudence, knavery and hard-heartedness. Think of this young scoundrel getting such a check cashed, and through the clearing-house knowing that his father would have to pay it, or allow the bank to close its doors. At first Amos R.'s indignation was such that he declared that he would not pay a cent; this last stab from his son, he said, was more than he could bear. But one of the directors of the bank offered to share the amount evenly with him, and after a time he agreed to the proposition. One can hardly conceive of a more despicable act than this of young Eno's—drawing on a bank which he had no funds, and after he had confessed to an embezzlement of $4,500,000! If Amos R. Eno had had his own way, he would have let the bank close its doors and would have sent his son to Sing Sing; and he deserves all praise for allowing the interests of the depositors to outweigh his personal feelings in the matter, and for his unexpected generosity in protecting those who, knowing that his integrity was beyond question, supposed that the stock had not degenerated in his son's hands.

The telegraph announces that Eno has fled to Europe.

Chairman Henderson's Speech.

Following is the speech of General Henderson of Missouri, permanent chairman of the national Republican convention, at Chicago, last Wednesday:

Gentlemen of the Convention:—We have assembled to survey the past history of the party; to rejoice, as we may, because of the good it has done; to correct errors, if errors there be; to discover if possible the wants of the present and wisest patriotic business to provide for the future. Our past history is the Union preserved, slavery abolished, and its former victims equally and honorably pleased by our sides in this convention; the public faith maintained, unbounded credit at home and abroad, a currency convertible into coin, and the pulses of industry throbbing with renewed health and vigor in every section of a prosperous and peaceful country. These are the fruits of triumph over adverse policies, gained in the military and civil conflicts of the last twenty-four years. Out of these conflicts have come a race of heroes and statesmen, challenging confidence and love at home, and respect and admiration abroad. And now, when we come to select a standard bearer for the approaching conflict, our chief embarrassment is not in the abundance of presidential materials.

New York has her true statesman, upon whose administration the fierce and even unfriendly light of public scrutiny has been turned, and the universal verdict is, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Vermont has her great statesman, whose record is as clear as the crystal springs of his native state, and whose virtue is as firm as its granite hills. Ohio can come with a name whose history is of the Republican party itself. Illinois can come with one who never failed in the discharge of a public duty, whether in the council chamber or on the field of battle. Maine has her renowned favorite, whose splendid abilities and personal qualities have endeared him to the hearts of friends, and the brilliancy of whose genius challenges the admiration of all Connecticut and Indiana may come with names scarcely less illustrious than these. And now in conclusion, if because of personal discommodities or the emergencies of the occasion, another name is sought, there yet remains that grand old hero of Atlanta. When patriotism calls he cannot, if he would, be silent, but grasping that banner, to him so dear, which he has already borne in triumph, he will march to a civic victory no less renowned than those of war. I thank you, gentlemen, for this distinguished mark of your confidence. The allusions to Arthur Sherman, Edmunds, Logan were heartily applauded, but when Blaine was alluded to as a man whose splendid abilities and personal qualities had endeared him to the hearts of his friends, and whose brilliancy challenged the admiration of mankind, a storm of applause broke out, and on the stage, the floor, and the galleries men stood up, and waving their hats and handkerchiefs, cheered again and again. Women also took part in the demonstration, and waved their fans and handkerchiefs. After their first stormy applause had worn itself out it was renewed, and once again, and the enthusiasm was as marked and intense as that which characterized the convention of 1850, at the time of Garfield's nomination. It was fully five minutes before the chairman was able to resume and finish his speech.

Tilden will Positively Decline the Nomination.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—An important fact has been disclosed here today, on the best of authority, that Samuel J. Tilden will soon publish a letter declaring that he is not a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, and forbidding the use of his name at the July convention. It is stated that some days since Dorsheimer, congressman for New York, wrote to Charles A. Dana, editor of the New York Sun, urging him to call upon Tilden, and ascertain positively what he intended to do with regard to the question of nominating him for president. Dorsheimer wrote that the Democratic party was actually suffering because of the uncertainty as to Tilden's intentions; that it was all befogged, doing nothing at a time when action was necessary, and all because nobody knew whether or not Tilden would run. In the interest of the party Dorsheimer begged Dana to go to Tilden, show him the bad effect of the present uncertainty, and urge him to declare himself. Last Friday Dorsheimer went to New York and saw Dana. The latter reported that he had visited Tilden and submitted to him all the arguments presented in Dorsheimer's letter. After listening patiently, Tilden replied that he had not wavered an instant in his purpose to forbid the use of his name.

A LETTER WRITTEN.
He then showed to Dana a letter written by himself, in which, in terms most positive, emphatic and unequivocal, he not only refused the use of his name, but declared that he would not accept the nomination if tendered him, and that he would not be a candidate under any circumstances. "I wrote this letter," said Tilden to Dana, "two months since, with the intention of making it public then, but they persuaded me to withhold it for a time, and I shall now have it read at the state Democratic convention on the 18th of June." In saying "they," Tilden no doubt referred to Bigelow, Manning and several other Democratic politicians who hold very close relations with him. He said "they" had some purposes to subvert which would have been injured by the immediate publication of the letter, and as he personally did not care for a little delay he consented to withhold it until the meeting of the state convention. Dana assured Dorsheimer that he saw and read Tilden's letter, and that there is no question of Tilden's sincerity; that he is not and will not be a candidate under any considerations. This news has completely upset the Democrats in congress.

The Oregon Horse War.
New York, June 4.—Jerome park races: free handicap, sweepstakes, all ages, mile—won by the Oregon horse Jim Renwick. Jim let the other horses do the running to the three-quarter post, when he began to move. As they entered the straight the rider used the whip on Rica, and Donahue, who held Renwick under a strong pull, gave his horse his head, and he drew away easily, winning by two lengths. Rica second, Enclid third. Time, 1:47.
