The Lobster's Name was Joe.

"Did you ever see the name a lob-ster is born with?" asked a Fulton market fish dealer. "It's marked on his person. No? Well, I'll show you one." The dealer took a lobster out of a heap on a marble slab. "It's name at Joe," the dealer said after in-specting one of its legs. "Now, can you find it?"

The customer took the lobster gingerly by the back of the neck, where it could not reach his hand with its nippers. Turning it on its back, so that the short brown legs at its side flopping backward, a yellowish streak half an inch long and an eighth of an inch wide was seen on the inside of the thigh. In this yellow streak, like a mosaic, were short lines, as though some one had printed it with indelible brown ink in backhand the characters JOE.

"Some lobsters are named Jim the dealer said, "some John, and I once clearly made out the name Julia.

Over the door of a small frame building in which a colored family is living, in Greenville, Tenn., is a pine board on which is the legend, now almost erased by rain and sun, "A Johnson, taylor," little beyond the western border of the town is a mar-ble monnment that marks the last home of "Andrew Johnson, president of the United States." And thus it is "that seldom a line of glory" is writ-ten upon life's page, but a line of poverty "runs parallel with it; and they that read the lustrous syllables of the one and stop and not decipher the spotted and worn inscription of the other, get the least half of the lesson earth has to give." Life is full of such lessons learned forgotten and learned again. To the philoso-pher they suggest volumes; to the persimist only the invisible line be-tween human greatness and earthly
