

The Daily Astorian.

ASTORIA, OREGON:
FRIDAY, JUNE 27, 1884.
ISSUED EVERY MORNING.
(Monday excepted)
J. F. HALLORAN & COMPANY.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.

THE ASTORIAN guarantees to its advertisers the largest circulation of any newspaper published on the Columbia river.

AROUND THE CITY.

'Have you any acid?'
The State sailed yesterday.
The Abernethy Castle has 9,254 barrels flour aboard.

The barkentine Wolffoot arrived in yesterday afternoon.
B. S. Worsley will have an auction sale to-morrow.
The quarterly examination for school teachers begins at the court house this morning.

The Clara Parker goes to Portland this morning and will bring down excursionists to-morrow to Astoria.

Among other good features of this cold weather is the fact that you needn't bother about taking the stove down.

J. Frank Page, M. D., late of Minneapolis, Minn., has located in this city. His office is opposite the Johnson building.

The temperance meetings at the M. E. church continue. To-night there will be another meeting at the same time and place.

The brig Levi Stearns, Johnson master, from San Francisco in ballast, arrived in yesterday afternoon. She loads lumber in the river.

THE WEEKLY ASTORIAN, in stamped wrappers, ready for mailing, published this morning; full of news and home happenings; price, one cent.

Prof. McDonald's lectures at Liberty hall are drawing large audiences and are highly spoken of. He gives phrenological examinations daily at the hall.

Salmon berries are plenty; raspberries of rich flavor are for peaches ripe and incense are also to be had, and there are rumors of blackberries on the way.

The low swamp adjoining Genevieve between Court and Astor is being filled with earth from the cut south. It is necessarily slow, and when completed will have added a valuable building area.

The body of the man who was found at Sand Island on Tuesday night has been identified as that of Oscar Karlson, boat puller for J. L. Haystack, boat 28, West Coast Fishing Co. The funeral will be from E. E. Franklin's at four o'clock this afternoon.

It is now feared that John Olson, a well known resident of upper Astoria, is drowned; a man who is believed was his boat puller is reported drowned at Sand Island, and a coffin will be taken down this morning. Olson has not been heard from since Monday night.

Capt. Gregory arrived down yesterday afternoon with the Steadick. He is of the opinion that a delegation from the Portland post of the grand army may join with Cushing Post, No. 14, in the first annual ball to be given at Occidental hall on the evening of July 4th.

On the night of April 4th Jas. Reeves got into some difficulty with Julius Frazier near Trullinger's mill, in the course of which he shot him, a full account of the affair being published in The Astorian of April 6th. Yesterday Frazier died in Portland, and Reeves was locked up in the county jail to await the action of the grand jury.

According to orders of Gen. Miles, commander of the department of the Columbia, the 10th anniversary of the independence of the United States of America will be appropriately observed on the 4th proximo at all military stations in the department. Except necessary military duties, all business will be suspended for the day; and the national salute will be fired at all posts in accordance with the regulations. The use of fireworks on military reservations will be prohibited where public property will be endangered thereby.

"EARTH TO EARTH AND DUST TO DUST."

Funeral Ceremonies and the End of Earth.

The funeral of the late A. Van Dusen took place yesterday morning, and seldom has there been a more universal expression of respect to the memory of a citizen. The greater part of the stores and business places were closed while the obsequies were in progress. The hall of Astoria Engine Co., No. One was draped in mourning. Mr. Van Dusen having been the first president of that organization, and the entire department made due observance of the event. At half past ten the bells tolled, and the funeral procession took its line of departure from the house. In front marched Astoria Engine Co., No. 1, in uniform; then Rescue Engine Co., No. 2, similarly arrayed; following them, Alert Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, also in uniform, and then Temple Lodge No. 7, A. F. and A. M., of which deceased had been P. D. G. M., and one of its oldest charter members; following them walked Sts. John Chapter of the same order, after them came the hearse, followed by the family of the deceased, and a long procession of citizens who testified by their presence and demeanor the regard they felt for the kindly old gentleman who would never visit Astoria's streets again.

Arriving at Grace church the funeral services of the Protestant Episcopal church were gone through with, by Rev. T. A. Hyland, former rector of the church, and now here on a visit from New York, pronouncing the funeral sermon. This over, the coffin was carried by the pall bearers to the steamer Clara Parker which conveyed them and a large party of relatives and friends to the cemetery at Clatsop where the Masonic funeral service was read, and the remains given sepulture in their last resting place.

In Memoriam.

HALL OF ASTORIA ENGINE CO. NO. 1. ASTORIA, OREGON, June 25, 1884.

Whereas, It has pleased the Supreme Ruler of the universe to take from our midst our brother fireman, A. Van Dusen, one of the founders of this company, and

Whereas, by this sad bereavement, this company is called upon to mourn the loss of a true friend, a faithful fireman, and a good citizen, therefore be it

Resolved, that in this our sudden affliction, we bow to the hand of an all-wise Providence who sees best for our good, and in this sudden warning, He reminds us that in the midst of life we are in death. Bereaving our friend's demise is common with ourselves, we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the family and relatives of our deceased brother.

Resolved, That in consideration of our respect to the memory of our president, the members of this company shall attend the funeral in a body in uniform, wearing the usual badge of mourning.

Resolved, That the hall shall be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days and that an engrossed copy of these resolutions be sent to his family.

Resolved, That the foregoing resolutions be published in the daily papers.

JAR. W. WELCH, Secy.
W. BOCK, Pres.
W. W. PARKER, Com.
L. E. SELBO, Secretary.

Next Legislature.

Following is the representation in the next legislature:

Table with 2 columns: HOUSE, SENATE. Rows include Baker, Benton and Polk, Clatsop and Tillamook, etc.

One Egg for Ten.

One ostrich egg for ten guests is the pattern at the California ostrich farm.

"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten," said Dwight Whiting, counting the guests he had invited to spend the day at the ostrich farm with him. "I guess one egg will be enough."

And having given utterance to the expression, quoth the Anaheim Gazette, he wended his way to the paddock and soon brought to the house an ostrich egg.

The triumph of the feast was the egg. For a whole hour it was boiled, and though there was some objection as to its being cooked, the shell was broken, for curiosity could no longer be restrained, and a three-pound hard-boiled egg laid upon the plate. But aside from its size there was nothing peculiar about it. It had the white and bluish tinge of duck eggs, and the yolk was of the usual color.

It tasted as it looked—like a duck egg—and had no flavor peculiar to itself. But it was immense! As it takes twenty-eight hen eggs to equal in weight the ostrich egg which was cooked, it is evident that the host knew what he was about in cooking only one. There was enough and to spare; and before leaving the table the party unanimously agreed that ostrich egg was good.

Departure of the Twenty-First Infantry.

On the State of California went yesterday afternoon a body of men that have had intimate connection with the history of this northwest coast; who can say in speaking of many stirring scenes in years gone by "all of which we saw and part of which we were"—the 21st Infantry, U. S. A. They have been stationed on this coast so many years that the history of the regiment is the history of Oregon and Washington, but about a month ago they were ordered to Fort Sidney, department of the Platte, and last evening they crossed Columbia bar, many of them for the last time.

The men were stowed away in the storage of the State in a manner that reflected little credit on our War Department. Common decency, regardless of what was due the men who had so long been here would have suggested that they be given comfortable transportation and not be packed as close as sardines in a box. Gen. Morrow and wife, and the greater portion of the officers accompanied their regiment to its new quarters.

A COMPLETE FAILURE.

Hasty Efforts to Acquire Wealth in Washington County.

A mistaken haste to be rich is one of the evils that affect a large part of mankind. Some get caught in O. & T. stock, others start newspapers, more buy lottery tickets, and so on, the original investment being oftentimes swallowed up in the general collapse of the scheme.

Now and then a new idea is adopted. If it wins, the winner has all the prestige of success; if it loses, the loser has no reason to feel at all lonesome. The neighboring county of Washington affords a bright example of misguided ambition in this direction. About the first of last April an enterprising man and wife named Keeckley came to Oregon and bought some land near Hon. W. D. Hart's place near Hillsboro. The slow process of accumulating wealth afforded by farming in Washington county didn't suit the enterprising Keeckley and his wife so they "put up a little job."

He procured a life insurance policy for $2,000 in the New York Mutual, payable to his wife, and he died last night, and so securing a large sum of money for $2,000 in the National Temperance Insurance company which was likewise made payable to the partner of his joys and fondest hopes, he prepared to fix up the second and more difficult part of the programme. By Friday last he had everything arranged. He thoughtfully borrowed $300 from his father-in-law, Mr. Johnson, who lived close by; told his wife to sleep there that night, and when nightfall came he went to a lonely grave near his farm, dug up the corpse, carried it to his shop, put it where he usually slept himself, set fire to the premises and skipped off to Portland. From Portland he went to Ashland where he played crazy, and the good people of Ashland not quite catching on to the racket arrested him.

On Saturday a boy passing the Keeckley place saw the smoking ruins and kicking around among the embers he found a caliche, a certain kind of rock, or two, and other evidences of mortality. A crowd gathered, and among the spectators were two or three who couldn't understand how it was that a little box of a place such as Keeckley owned could make heat enough to burn up human bones and pulverize the whole anatomy as that was.

The doubts were only strengthened when Mrs. Keeckley, who had been calm and demure until a dream that she had had about a tramp coming for money and being refused, and getting "mad" and going away and coming back again and killing her Keeckley and burning the house. The Washington county people considered this too thin altogether, and when it became apparent that $2,000 depended on the Keeckley ability to make them swallow that story they refused. Sheriff Hale started for Ashland to interview Mr. Keeckley, and after proving to that individual that he couldn't be there in Ashland in the night and being all burned up but a skull and a rib in the ruins of his house at Hillsboro, Mr. K. agreed to the correctness of the sheriff's views and owned up to the whole rascally business.

His reasons were that he couldn't make a living there; that he wanted to go where no one would know him, and that those whom he had known would think he was dead. Mr. K. is young, only 27, and after such a promising beginning it is fair to presume that his next move will be more successful. Probably his only regret in the matter is that he wasn't able to get a fresher subject to burn in his place than that furnished by midnight grave robbery. Take it altogether Mr. K. has efforts to acquire wealth are heartily to be commended, and to deserve imitation, and it is probably just as well that they resulted in a complete failure.

"Tinned Salmon."

It is laughable to read the reports of "important meetings" published in the English trade papers, of such order as that at the International Health Exhibition, London, held last month by those interested in the sale of "tinned provisions of all kinds, as meats, fruits and fish." The most glaring example of wasted energy is offered in the effort to "popularize and overcome the prejudice against tinned salmon." In the reports, the names of a number of gentlemen prominent as handlers of canned salmon are mentioned, and their remarks are briefly chronicled. With one single exception all were greatly interested in their undertaking, and evinced a determination to make zealous efforts to destroy the prejudice against canned salmon. The dissector was Mr. E. Blake, of Leadenhall street, who, after expressing regret for inability to attend, wrote: "I had disposed, however, to take exception to your suggestion that any prejudice exists against tinned salmon as an article of consumption, since the public has been using it for the last ten years or more, and no untoward accidents have been made against it—such as causing the death of the consumer—it is never accompanied by poisons; and I think the article is quite able to take care of itself." In the report, the statistics would have shown the gathering of public spirited traders something of the popularity of the king of table fish, and how they have convinced them that they had been unnecessarily alarmed at the state trade. The total Pacific coast pack for 1883 was 1,206,400 cases. The Fraser river pack alone was 175,000 cases; other British Columbia rivers furnished 68,000 cases. The shipments to England were about 100,000 cases, and to Australia the shipments ranged in the neighborhood of 75,000 cases. It may be necessary to encourage the sale of salmon in London, but the dealers in this city are at their wits' ends to satisfy their present demand with the extraordinary home allowance out of the million cases which constitute the pack of an average season. For the present season the indications are that the pack will be much lighter than usual, and it will exercise the salmon packers and dealers to satisfy the usual demand for export.—Cal. Grocer and Canner.

"MUST PAY OR GO TO JAIL."

Twenty Thousand Dollars to be Immediately Forthcoming.

Mr. A. Booth, who is enjoying his annual sojourn at Astoria, received a telegram from Chicago yesterday afternoon announcing that his son had won his $20,000 suit, the decision of the judge being that the defendant, Gordon Corwith, "must pay or go to jail."

It seems that in December, 1882, there was a big deal in corn in Chicago, in which a good many grain men were interested. Corwith, with a few others was trying to corner the corn market at that time, and in order to raise the necessary funds to carry on his speculations he got Wm. N. Booth, a son of A. Booth's to advance him the money at different times.

He represented that he had invested the money loaned him in Northwestern railroad bonds, and he always reported a profit. He also said that his father, Nathan Corwith, and some other men had formed a syndicate to buy all the bonds of the road, and thus get control of its management.

Young Booth and young Corwith had always been close friends, and it was on the strength of this friendship felt for him that these various sums were lent him. When the corn market collapsed in December, 1882, and young Corwith, instead of having made a fortune of between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000, had failed with liabilities of $250,000, young Booth learned where his money had gone. He had Corwith arrested on a capias, and sued him for $20,000, the amount loaned him, with the above result. As Corwith is "well fixed" and to go to jail at seventy-five cents a day would be too slow a way for an ambitious young man to pay a debt of $20,000, the probability that young Booth will get his money back is very flattering.
