An Ancient Trapper

Up a tributary of the Pend d'Oreille river, on which is situated Thompson Falls, is a Frenchman named Baptiste Ducharne. He is 103 years of age, and first saw a railway car last fall, when a train crossed the Corincan defile, over which is the highest wooden being in the mark! This marks file, over which is the highest wooden bridge in the world. This man has a half-blood daughter at Fort Corville, 70 years old, of whom he always speaks as "my baby." Ducharne was a member of Colonel Ashley's expedition in 1802 and trapped for the company all that season. The following year he joined Bonneville and was with him until he disbanded. After that he trapped and sold furs to both that he trapped and sold furs to both the Hudson Bay and American Fur Companies. He ascended the Yellowstone river in 1824 and saw the geysers, but, like the other trappers who saw portions of the wonderful scenery of the park, he was more in-terested in furs than scenery, and never told any capable writer of what

In Scotland they have a curious way of fishing that takes the medal for the ease and repose with which it is conducted. The fisherman we will say is after pike. Selecting a big goose from his barnyard, or half a dozen geese, as the case may be, he ties a baited hook and line about five feet long to their feet and on reach-ing the water turns them in. The ing the water turns them in. The birds of course swim out, and the fisherman lights his pipe and sits down. In a few minutes a fish sees the bait and seizes it, giving tha goose a good pull. The bird starts for the shore at full tilt, frightened half to death, dragging the fish upon the bank, when it is unhooked. The line being rebaited, the feathered fisherman is again sent out to try its fisherman is again sent out to try its luck. A flock of geese can make quite a haul in the course of a day, the human fisherman having only to take off the game and bait the hooks, the pulling in and hooking being done by the birds.

Parties who have been prospecting and surveying on the south fork of the Puyallup river, W. T., report game very abundant in that section. Deer, bear, and cougar are numerous, as are grouse and pheasants. Bear are so familiar as to frequently visit camps in the night and help themselves to fresh and salt meats and any other kind of edibles that happen to be laying around loose.

By to-day there will be but seven hours' staging between the Baker City branch of the Oregon Railway and Navigation company's railroad and the Oregon Short Line. The distance between the two ends is now fifty miles. Work is being pushed steadily shead, and within a very short time another transcontinental line will be completed.
