With our Americam ideas of train-

habit can be offensive or that they unwittingly outrage the rights of oth-ers. Instead they sit in severe judgment upon our lack of cordiality and national brusquerie. The lower classes are born pilferers. This fact alone makes railroading unusually dangerous. The high duties on steel and iron put a premium upon every obtainable pound, consequently, they draw out the spikes, steal the fishplates, and frequently they lug off the rails. the rails.

were discovered there one morning from which every bolt, bar, nail, nut, chain and rivet had been taken, so that they literally fell in pieces when removed. All this entails a degree of watching as harassing as it is nec-essary. Consequently after adding the duty of watchman to his other the duty of watchman to his other labors the American railroad boy in exile rebels at being called unmannerly, even if he does outrage Mexican custom and refresh himself occasionally by honestly eating an orange on the platform.—Corr. method of cultivating the potato there is peculiar. The ground is dug up and covered with a layer of kelp, and after this fertilizer has been exposed to the air for a week or two it is dug under and the soil shaped into high, narrow beds and planted in shallow drills. The sun's heat alone is depended upon and every oppor-tunity must be given it to penetrate the ground, which in that frigid country not only gives out no warmth of its own, but frequently remains frozen throughout the year at a depth beyond the influence of the sun's rays. El Nacional, one of the leading newspapers, reviews the situation at length, and declares that his lack of politeness unfits the American for railroading, that his bluff manner and curt replies constantly wound the sensitive Southern traveler, and hints broadly that he will do well to the sensitive Southern traveler, and hints broadly that he will do well to pack his "gripsack" and go home.

This seems the added straw of ingratitude to the burden of dangers and disagreeabilities the American railroader in exile is now bearing.

The Mexicans are undoubtedly the politest people on earth—they have pelnty of time. One man or woman will keep a whole train of street cars waiting while they enjoy the usual embrace, hand-shake and well-bred nothings of a Mexican leave-taking without one thought of the inconvenwithout one thought of the inconven-ience and loss of time they cause the remaining passengers.
