Since the 1st of last April there have been shipped from Astoria 121,997 cases salmon. Of this amount 47,498 cases went on board the San Francisco steam-ers, 67.855 went on the Eskdale, Iluta, Chas. Cotesworth and Woodlark; 44,576 on the Aberystwith Castle and Jessie Jam-ison to London, and 22,041 overland, via Northern Pacific Railroad. The City of Delhi, now loading, will take in the neighborhood of 60,000 cases.

A CARD.

ASTORIA, Ogn., July 28, 1884

Miss Charlotte Thompson, RESPECTED MADAM .- We, the under gened citizens of Astoria, learning of your intended visit, and being grateful thereby, your recognized fame having preceded you, earnestly solicit as a favor, that in addition to the great enjoyment anticipated in witnessing your persona-tion of Jane Eyre, you will on the second evening render your famous impersona-tion of Nell Gwynne. Awaiting your re ply to the above request, we remain, Yours respectfully, Dr. A. L. Fulten. J. F. Halloran, E. Dement. H. Cooper, Magnus C. Crosby, Dr. Jay Tuttle, D. Morgan, jr., H.C. Thompson, C. Leinenweber, I. W. Case, J. G. Hustler, Frank J. Taylor, r, Frank J. Laylor, on, F. D. Winton, ser, Dr Wm. D. Baker, A. V. Allen, R. N. Carnahan, A. J. Megler.

And many others.

Squemoqua-Squemoqhe

It is again suggested here and there that the matter of changing the names of Astoria's streets be agitated. The most prominent idea is to do away with the words Chenamus and Squemoque and one or two other names. To call the streets running east and west, First, a bottle of Leroy's Cough Balsam. streets running east and west, First, streets running east and west, First, Second, Third, etc., is thought by many to be in the direct line of progression. Others argue that as our records of property sales are largely based upon these words, that any change would create confusion in the matter of legal record. As a matter of fact, if the change is ever made it should be made now, as the increase in the sise-of the city makes any change more and more objectionable as the years go by. The word Squemoqua has an uncouth sound, that could easily be replaced by a word of more euphonious appearance.

THE PROPOSED NEW COURT HOUSE,

ASTORIA, July 28, 1884. ED. ASTORIAN:-It is said the county ommissioners will meet to consider the advisability of building a new court house. When they meet let them bear in mind the fact that tax-payers of this county are paying a larger percentage as taxes than is paid by any other community in this state. Let them remember also that the county, the city and the school district are all bonded for debts incurred. The county undoubtedly needs a court house, because the present building of that name is rotten and unsafe.

A wooden structure can be put up, suitable for all uses for the next ten years, at a cost of $7,500, to which we will add ten years' interest at the rate of S per cent,, and we have a total of $13,500. The lower floor to be used as a court-room and the upper floor for sheriff and clerks' offices. The interest for the same length of time on a $40,000 brick building will amount to $32,000. Thus by comparison we see that in ten years' time we shall be able to tear down, burn or give away our wooden building and still have left the sum of $18,500, the difference between the cost of and interest upon the wooden building and the interest upon the cost building and the interest upon the cost of the brick. The wooden building can be paid for in county orders at par, The schooner Big River, from San Francisco, came in last Sunday to load lumber.

City Courier, out of one cedar tree, seven feet in diameter, built a one story frame house, including the shingles on the roof, dimensions 21x16, cut 4,000 shakes, made 4,000 shingles, and has wood enough left for 5,000 more shingles. There is a scarcity this year of yellow jackets and hornets in Western Washing-ton, which fact is attributed to the severe weather during the past winter. Civil engineers do not regret their absence, as they have during previus summers been greatly annoyed by them. The Polk County Remizer thinks that the fruit raisers of Oregon can save to themselves and the state thousands of dollars by destroying the worm webs on the fruit trees without further delay. If this work is neglected they will find their

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company have purchased a large scow from J. B. Montgomery, to be used as a pontoon at the Kalama crossing. She will have an addition of forty-one feet in length built on to make her the same size as the huge wharf boat which is to be used at the other end of the crossing. The four small scows used on the bridge work below the city will not be taken to Kalama, it being considered much preferable to have one large pontoon than four small ones.

White stockings are coming in again. Doctors are beginning to discover that the sole of the foot absorbs dyes, whether stockings. They (the doctors, not the stockings) attribute to this several new diseases that have lately been added to the heritage of our human flesh.

John Gournier, who lives on the Slus law river, has been in Oregon since 1819. He came as an employee of the Hudson Bay company when only 18 years old, and is now 83 years old. He says that when the large forest fires of 1846 burned all the timber along the coast from the Columbia down, many animals were consumed by the fiery elements, and thousands of bear, elk, panther, deer and to ther animals collected on the beach away from the fire as one foriorn but peaceful family. The old gentleman has never seen a railroad, telegraph line or heard the puff of a locomotive.

The following is from the Oregon Mist: It is calculated for all newspapers: "It you know of any local event in your neighborhood of interest to the psople—id does any one move in or out; any one die get married or run away; get kicked by a mule, bit by a dog or snake?—in short, if anything out of the ordinary run takes place, and you have reason to believe that you know as much about it as any one else, take a postal card and let us know about it. The letter was very flowery, highly complimentary, and in some instances greatly exaggrated the facts. When some of these overdrawn statements were pointed out to Mr. Harger, he stated that he had previously prepared a similar letter for Tacoma, and that when our people saw that they would not consider the statements contained in the Seattle letter overdrawn. A charming girl wore at a recent party a very effective toilet in white and gold a very effective toilet in white and gold; the dress of white mull was simply made, the skirt being devoid of trimming save for the plastron of openwork embroidery down the front, while the bodice was cut quite high at the throat; around the waist was tied a large sash of old-gold surah, matching in tint the golden hair of the wearer; a ribbon of the same hue held a locket in place at the throat and a bit of the vellow surah gave the high bit of the yellow surah gave the high lights for the white, lace-trimmed hat, while a bunch of field daisies was worn at the belt or on the white parasol,

A charming wrapper of pongee is garnished with wards and yards of soft embroidery and bows of pale blue, pink and pongee-colored satin ribbon. The back falls in a full Watteau plait, set in at the yoke under embroidery urilles, and is cut in a long-rounded train, bordered by a foot plaiting of the same with two ruffles of embroidery above it. The front is gathered from the throat down, drawn narrow at the waist, and from there gradually widening to the low edge. This gathered center is bordered down either side by cascades of embroidery with a dainty knot of ribbon in the three colors tucked under every other fold. The sleeves are made loose, falling just below the elbow, and finished by deep ruffles caught up at the inside seams with bows.

Tucks and plaitings have by no means

Tucks and plaitings have by no means abdicated their lengthy reign, but, on the contrary, have this season multiplied indefinitely. Clusters of tiny tucks are seen upon the flounces of dresses of every description, from the airiest musling the heaviert Lorens silk and the latest to the heaviest Lyons silk, and the latest device in nuns' veiling and cashmere is to have no apron drapery, tunic or pan-nier at the front and sides of the skirt, nier at the front and sides of the skirt, but to arrange these breadths in a series of plaits, extending in mathematical ar-ray from belt to hem. There is a bouff-ant effect at the back, and at the left side of the front is tied a full bow and ends of rather wide ribbon to take away the look of plainness which the simple kilting gives. kilting gives.
