He holds a mortgage which falls due next Tuesday for $1,500, with interest, and pays the indebtedness. F. Owen leases the material at the rate of $75 a month; various parties who hold stock costing $22.50 a share get $7 a share.

Henry Sale of Woodland farm, in this vicinity, makes a good showing with his poultry from March 1 to August 1. He says: "With 22 hens I have received 108 dozen eggs, raised 144 chickens and 80 ducks (it being more profitable to hatch and raise ducklings with hens than ducks). Feed for chickens and ducks during that time cost $20. Spring chickens sell at $4.50 and $5 per dozen, ducks from 75 cents to $1 apiece, eggs from 25 cents to 35 cents per dozen."

AN INTERESTING POINT.

This session of the circuit court has been almost totally devoid of interest except to those directly concerned in the suits, and beyond a formal record of the day's transactions but little attention has been bestowed upon it. Yesterday, however, came up a question for adjudication, which was ably argued and promptly decided. Last week one A. Baldatta was indicted by the grand jury for alleged assault with intent to kill. The alleged assault was committed on the north side of Sand Island. When the case was called yesterday, Fulton Bros. appeared for the defense, and McBride and Winton for the state. The point raised was did the court have jurisdiction; could a man be tried in Oregon for an offense committed in Washington territory waters?

Seldom has a case been argued in the county with greater force or keener reasoning, each side advancing both law and logic in support of their views concerning this question which is one of importance as establishing a precedent.

Judge Taylor decided that the court had jurisdiction in the matter, and the case was given to the jury without evidence or further argument, a verdict of guilty being rendered by that body.

Enlarging the County Boundaries.

There is on the lower Nehalem in Tillamook county a large area of country that is naturally tributary to Astoria as a distributing center and which is being filled up by settlers who, desiring a market for their produce, are agitating the question of annexation. They are reported as being desirous to be set off from Tillamook county and incorporated into Clatsop county. The idea has not yet, assumed tangible shape, but seems to be that if Clatsop county will continue the present road down the Seaside to the county line, a distance of some sixteen miles, they will complete a road from their settlement northward to meet it. It will require hearty cooperation on the part of all concerned and some special legislative enactments next winter, all of which are among the possibilities.

Journalistic Compliments.

Will the rogue, swindler, trickster, arch-traitor, sordid wretch, greedy spoiler, blustering idiot, arrant humbug, wily speculator, bookless booby, weak ignoramus, faithless renegade, shuffling imposter, juggling charlatan, bundle of clap-trap, cheap swashbuckler, scheming demagogue, shameless time server, dissembling hypocrite, unprincipled politician, and self-worshiped, debased, ignorant, unscrupulous knave who writes the things in the Post-Intelligencer please put his name to the bottom of them in the future, so that the right man be held responsible?—Seattle Herald, 12th.

BEEF CATTLE SUPPLY.

My own idea is that the day is not far distant when the coast counties, and not the region known as the "inland empire," shall supply not only Astoria and the river towns, but the metropolis as well, with good and healthy beef. The tide of live beef has been in past years constantly ebbing toward the ocean, but I look for a reflux that shall ere six years more, drive it up stream. To begin with, I will admit that the bunch grass makes fatter beef than any other sort of herbage. And there you have to stop. There is nothing else to be said in favor of the great plains. The hot summers often render it difficult for the lowing herds to obtain a sufficient supply of water anywhere contiguous to the pastures. Then there are the cold winters with the deep snow that covers the grass so that an ox can get no sustenance, and the ice so hard that when he reaches the brook he can get no drink, and must therefore perish of thirst. Add to this the fact that the eastern counties are settling up rapidly and the land once used for pasturage is now being rapidly converted into orchards and fields of grain, and you will readily discern reasons why the cattle trade in the coast counties of Washington territory (and Oregon, too, for that matter) should increase rather than diminish from year to year. There are no cold winters in these coast counties; and the cattle that have been allowed to hibernate for themselves in densely wooded copses where the browse was good, have frequently come out fatter and more marketable than those which have remained in barns and stood to hay all winter. And when it comes down to the consideration of dairying, nobody will deny the superiority of clover for producing butter and cheese.—Tom Merry in Oregonian.

Johnson's Cyclopædia Examined by Another Eminent Scholar and Divine.

The examination of Johnson's cyclopædia confirms my opinion of its superiority over the bulky Britannica as containing the facts we are searching for when we consult an encyclopædia. Without the elaborate discussion which we prefer to read in treatics of our own selection. The editorial staff is composed of those who have achieved high standing in the several departments, and some of them wear the highest honors in the walks of science, art and literature.

Their names coupled with the editors in chief, President Barnard, of Columbia College, and Prof. Guyot, of Princton College, N. J., are the warrant for acuracy, comprehensiveness and impartiality.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 25, 1883.

The Nashville Colored Concert Co. gave a grand concert last evening in Plymouth church for the benefit of the Bethel Mission. A most cordial greeting awaits them whenever they may favor us with a visit.

JAMES LANE,
Ch'n Com. Plymouth Church.

Those who assume to know predict that the Central Pacific will lease the Oregon and California railroad, and that the recent visit of Henry Villard to Europe was to bring about this end. When Charles Crocker, vice president of the Central Pacific was in Victoria a few days ago, he remarked to a Portland gentleman that negotiations might be commenced soon for such a lease, adding that the Central had tried more than once to secure it, but negotiations were always broken off. Whatever will be done, will be done between Mr. Villard and C. P. Huntington in New York.—Oregonian 14.

WHAT!

Do You Think that "Jeff" of The Chop House

Gives you a meal for nothing, and a glass of something to drink? "Not much!" but he gives a better meal and more of it than any place in town for 25 cents. He buys by the wholesale and pays cash. "That settles it."

"JEFF"

At enormous expense has secured the services of PROFESSOR ELLIS, one of the best white cooks in the state; and Jeff proposes to excel any of his former efforts in the culinary art. Italian dishes a specialty.

His Success

Financially and socially are largely due to his excellent health. If his system were clogged and feverish, no doubt he would fail as so many others do. But why not enjoy good health when one can please the palate at the same time? Syrup of Figs is not only pleasant to the taste, it also cleanses the system thoroughly, yet painlessly; it is harmless in its nature, and strengthens the organs on which it acts so that regular habits may be formed, and the sufferer permanently restored to health and happiness. Sample bottles free and large bottles for sale by W. E. Dement & Co.

VERDICT FOR DEFENDANT.

The Only Correct Version of a Historical Dialogue.

'George," said his father, with a countenance more in sorrow than in anger. "George, some one has cut down my favorite cherry tree. Do you know anything about it?"

Young Washington did not quail before his father's accusing glance. He looked him straight in the eye, and an expression of honest resolution gleamed in the clear eyes and frank countenance.

"My father," he said, "I will not deceive you. I do know something about it, but that is not the issue at all. You have, in effect, charged me with being privy to the destruction of your favorite tree. Now, the question is, since you have filed information and laid this charge against me, what do you know about it?"

"I know that you have a hatchet," replied his father sternly, I know what a boy with a hatchet is liable to do. I know that some one has cut down my favorite cherry tree——"

"Stop right here," interrupted the future father of his country. You say this was your tree?"

"I do."

"How came it yours?"

"I planted it,"

'Now sir, are you certain it was not on this farm when you came here?"

"No, sir, it was not."

"Then why do you say so?"

"Why do I say what?"

"That's right; evade, quibble, crawl out of it somehow. All right. If you don't want to answer a plain simple question you don't have to."

"But I didn't say it was on the farm when I came here."

"Oh, very well, deny it. Is there any other retraction you would like to make?"

"I don't retract anything. I merely declared that I never said that tree was on the farm when I came here."

"Oh, well, father don't get excited and talk loud. You may go back on your entire statement if you wish. Perhaps you will next try to make us believe that this farm wasn't here either when you came."

"Why, of course it was here. I don't—"

"Didn't you say a moment ago that it wasn't?"

"That was the tree!"

"Ah, yes; you turn it off on the tree now. You've been talking about the tree all this time, then?"

"Why, certainly I have."

"Then you just admitted that it was here when you came here?"

"No, my son, that was the farm."

"But not half a dozen questions ago you admitted that. You said in these very words, 'Why, of course it was here,' did you not?"

"I said those words, but I was speaking of the farm."

"And yet you said but this very moment that all this time you had been talking about the tree. It is useless to continue this examination. My father, of all human vices lying is the commonest, and I doubt not it is the worst. It blunts our moral sensibilities, it leads us to distort and exaggerate simple statements of facts; it blurs our powers of intelligent observation, until even a man of ordinary scholarship and intellectual development is unable to tell whether he is talking about a farm or a cherry tree. The complaint is dismissed. I doubt very much if you can even establish the fact that you ever owned a tree. Go to the nursery, and if you intend planting a tree in the place of the one you imagine you have lost, you had better take a man with you to show you the ground, lest you might plant the tree in your hat. You may go."

Sadly the old man turned away, but he told the man who helped him plant the new tree that if he had a hundred boys he wouldn't let another one of them study law.—Burdette.
