Astoria and Vicinity.
 "When Johnny comes marching home again."
 Nearly 2,000 people are at the seashore this season.
 Torchlight procession to-night; music by the band.
 The Alden Besse is loading lumber and spars at East Portland for Hong Kong.
 The White Star Packing Co. holds its annual meeting at ten o'clock this morning.

The stockholders of the Odd Fellows' Land and Building association meet at two o'clock this afternoon.
 The victorious delegation from Astoria will be down on the Wide West this evening. Give 'em a hand.
 Give the boys a welcome to-night. They met worthy contestants in the valley and won a well-earned victory.
 Bran is being shipped to California from this state by the thousand sacks this year. The Columbia carried down 3,504 sacks.

The attention of the ladies is specially directed to E. C. Holden's auction sale of millinery goods, etc., at half-past two this afternoon.
 The Mies leaves Gray's dock at 7:45 to-morrow morning for the seashore, the Cape and Ilwaco. Get your tickets at Capt. Gray's office.

Reports from the sea-shore are to the effect that the boys are having no end of fun, which makes it all the more aggravating to those who can't get away.

The barkentine North Bend went up stream yesterday in tow of the Clara Parker. The Clara Parker will load at Portland for Ilwaco, coming down on Monday.

Blood on the door knob and bell-pull of a prominent physician yesterday morning led the p. p. to wonder greatly thereat. There may be a startling item revealed yet.

Yesterday's ASTORIAN containing a criticism on Ingersoll's was so quickly bought up that an extra edition was run off, copies of which can be had at the office this morning.

An Olympic merchant found an old dictionary in his store last Tuesday, said dictionary having been lost by the O. M. in 1859. It is a safe bet that that merchant doesn't advertise.

The Werra, 106 days from Liverpool; the C. E. Bennett, 116 days from Philadelphia; the Griseldale, 146 days from Liverpool; and the Alpha, 145 days from London are the leading vessels now looked for.

The excursion to Westport next Wednesday on the Clara Parker promises to be one of the most enjoyable affairs of the season. Tickets can be had at the City Bookstore, or from any of the members.

There is a man named Redell in Portland who has a copy of the remarkable faculty of mesmerizing Redell. He is a godsend to the Portland papers who consider him worth half a column.

W. D. Palmer, Robt. Ingersoll's agent, says the redoubtable Robert will come back here and give another lecture. That's good. "Let us have courage." "Our courage is the most intelligent thing about us."

From all accounts the Astoria boys captured more than the prizes at the recent contest. In Salem they set the solemn Salemies wild with delight and woke them up to the fact that this end of the state plays second fiddle to none other.

No. Ones are going to celebrate their fourteenth anniversary next Friday by a grand ball at the Occidental hall. The proceeds will be devoted to the purchase of their new horse carriage. It will be the pleasing duty of the citizens of Astoria to see that their expectations are realized.

The Seattle newspapers are having a regular monkey and parrot time. Solve the problem as others have done. Appeal to the good sense of the public. Get out an honest, reliable newspaper as good as the town will stand and be sure of success. That is what the Post-Intelligencer seems to be doing.

Inquiry among the salmon packers of Astoria and vicinity elicits the fact that the great industry of this section will be well represented at the New Orleans exposition next winter. Such an exposition as the New Orleans affair is just like advertising. For every dollar you expend you get one hundred back.

At the late session of the Firemen's State association, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Ben S. Woodley, of Rescuer Engine Co., No. 2, Astoria; Vice-president, C. H. Strang, of Alert Hook and Ladder Co., No. 1, Salem; Secretary and Treasurer, Frank E. Hodgkin, of Capital Engine Co., No. 1, Salem. Directors—C. H. Stewart, of Albany, F. E. Hicks, Astoria, and L. C. Blythe, Eugene.

Sometimes when you have nothing else to do, put the receiver of the telephone to your ear and note the different sounds. In the early morning you will hear the song of the birds. Further along in the morning comes the din and rattle of wheels oftentimes drowning attempted conversation; in the evening comes the clinks of sound, the combination of a dozen movements in as many offices. Sometimes, too, you may hear something not intended for your ears, and then "his time to hang it up."

Geo. Plesance of Portland, has an experience not common with fathers. He thrashed his boy the other day for some infraction of parental discipline, and the youngster went to the police court and had his papa arrested. The "old man" had to appear and give bonds for further appearance when the case was called, and on going home to dinner he found the cause of all this trouble calmly sipping his soup. This aroused the parental ire and Mr. P. again switched his hopeful son who at once posted off and had his papa arrested again. If the boy in general follow his example they will make it mighty troublesome for their ancestral progenitors.

The extraordinary time—300 yards in 35 1/2 seconds—made by Geo. Noland at Albany last Thursday occasions considerable comment. The record is a splendid one, and for an amateur splendidly equalled. The best time on record was made at Edinburgh, Scotland, on the 2nd of last January, by H. Hutchings, a professional. He made 300 yards in 30 seconds. In America the best 300 yards record is credited to L. E. Myers, an amateur, who made that distance at New York city, Oct. 22, 1881, in 31 1/2 seconds. It would appear from these figures that if our feet-fimbed city attorney were to practice a little, the championship might be transferred to the extreme western verge of the continent.

Nicely furnished room to let, to one or two single gentlemen. Best location in town. Enquire at this office.

SPECIAL MEETING.
 A special meeting of Rescuer Engine Co. No. 2, was held at the company's rooms last evening, C. H. Stockton in the chair, H. F. Pral, secretary. It was decided that the company turn out in uniform to meet and welcome the returning teams this evening, and that the other companies be invited to participate. A committee of arrangements consisting of C. H. Stockton, T. A. Trullinger, A. A. Cleveland, Wm. McCormick and Al. Ross was appointed, and the meeting adjourned.
 The boys return on the Wide West this evening and will get a hearty welcome home. Every member of the department and every citizen who takes pride in the achievements of the Astoria Fire Department is cordially invited to take part.

NOTE "SALMON NOTES."
 ASTORIA, Aug. 22, 1884.
 EDITOR ASTORIAN:—
 While salmon seems of dull sale it is but the effect of the general depression in all lines of goods. The Pacific coast cannot overstock the world. Let salmon be pushed into all the markets and it will be a comparatively scarce article. The whole pack of the coast last year (1883) did not equal the quantity of one can of salmon per year to each inhabitant of the United States, to say nothing of the millions of people elsewhere.

This year the pack is estimated to be 200,000 cases short of last. Its cheapness now will stimulate its consumption. But having reached a figure that is profitable to the packer it will not go lower. Next year many will probably not run, and the pack will probably be greatly reduced. In fact several canneries are being closed out by process of law now. This will not throw any salmon on the market, however, to be auctioned off, as it has been disposed of so that none falls into the packer's hands. No canneryman will be foolish enough to pack next year on present prices. The salmon of the Columbia river should be sold on the river instead of being sent to San Francisco, or through San Francisco lookers. The policy of shipping around the Horn to New York is now agitated. Freight by rail is less than on the cars and it would seem to be of advantage to the packer to ship that way. It was so claimed last year and the experiment was made but resulted in no practical benefit to the packer. When it reaches New York it is sold at the market price less the difference in freight between rail and sea. In other words the buyer got the benefit of the less freight. Worse than that it had the effect to break the market, and cause all the salmon sent east afterwards, that is, this season, to be sold less. So if a vessel goes to New York now with a cargo who will arrive in the winter and depress the market for salmon next spring and affect next year's business, unless the salmon should be handled differently.

RUMORED RAILROAD CHANGE.
 The Seattle Post-Intelligencer of the 15th of August said: "A number of important changes are contemplated among the railroads of Oregon and Washington. The two most important of these are full operation of the new sections from Portland to Kalama, and from Tacoma to Seattle; this including, of course, the use of the new iron ferry boat on the Columbia river. It is said that through trains will be run to Seattle, including sleepers and dining cars, and that all freight for this city will be brought by rail, and probably all freight for points south of this city, Western and inland counties. A. J. Thomas, second vice-president of the Northern Pacific, will be sent from New York to Portland, there to have general supervision of all the consolidated interests. General Manager Buckley will be transferred from Tacoma to Portland. The head office of the steamboats on Puget Sound will remain in Tacoma, and the transfer of Port Townsend, British Columbia and Alaska freight will continue there to be made. The shops will also be retained there, and all machinery and tools will be sent to this place, but there will be a marked loosening of the pressure put upon other towns for the benefit of that, notably to the relief of this city."

An item on the fourth page this morning contradicts this statement.

REMARKS ON INGERSOLL'S LECTURE.
 ASTORIA, Aug. 22, 1884.
 ED. ASTORIAN:
 I heard Robert Ingersoll lecture in this city last night, two long hours. He is a wonderful man; he is a wonderful orator; he has a wonderful influence over his audience, and 'tis all because he is sincere, truthful and honest. But he looks to me to have a white veil over his eyes and ears and he is blind and deaf. Ingersoll's body from just below his eyes and ears to the soles of his feet is inspired with an unusual inspiration, so much so that when he opens his mouth music flows forth like the ripple upon the mountain lake like the music from an aolian harp. Should that subtle veil that covers his brain, his eyes and his ears, be rent asunder, Ingersoll would be a man such as will be in the future, when all mankind shall have learned enough to live upon something that is not of the chemistry of the cows, cabbage, or cornfield; when mankind shall have learned to live without so much toil and suffering; when mankind shall know enough to be happy when they are surrounded by so much that as yet they know not of; surrounded by so much wisdom that mankind shall not yet learned. Would that some power would tear the veil that covers his brain, eyes and ears, that might open the flood gates of wisdom, and forever put an end to so much suffering and woe in this world.

We have long read books written by men whose brains were inspired by listened to sermons and orations delivered by men whose brains only were inspired, and they were and are not true; for the simple reason that their bodies were not inspired, and their souls were carnal and they failed to deal truthfully with their fellow men. Their writings and teachings have not yet made mankind honest and truthful for this simple reason: these men whose brains were inspired, wrote and spoke to gratify their carnal bodies, whose wants were base and lustful, but they have been men whose hearts were on the trails that mankind have and will travel in the different paths of progression, from that long and hidden past to the resplendent future when mankind will be peaceful and happy.

Ingersoll is doing a good work in weaving out a mountain trail of thought through the wilderness for mankind to travel in the journey of progress. He is the dark and hidden past to a more enlightened future. Ingersoll's inspired body below his brain, eyes, and ears is now doing more to make the author a better writer, the artisan and farmer to work better and sing sweeter songs than all the brain inspired writers and teachers that have inhabited the earth. Oh, Ingersoll, with an inspired body whose greatness as yet has not been equaled, but whose brain and spirit are so thickly veiled that you can only realize the physical wants of mankind and not even dream of a better day coming whose teachings will outlast the ages whose teachings now are felt through all the world as none have been who have taught before you in the past. A few years ago, a little babe! You have grown to be a great man, and all you yet know is that in a few years you must die like other men and that is the end of Ingersoll! What a sad sight to contemplate! Good bye Ingersoll! We are going another way. We prefer to last a little longer; to read the veil asunder that I have been here, never have paid for the clothes I wear, and an in fact since I was a child.

"Open Confession."
 There is one man in Oregon who believes that "open confession is good for the soul," judging from the following card, signed "E. C. Clark," and printed in the Times-Mountaineer of The Dalles: "This certifies that I owe Mr. Nichols $46 for board, and Mr. Nichols asked me several times for it; on account of which I have been some little hard feelings between us, and in consequence I have tried to injure Mr. Nichols' character by telling lies about him around this town when under the influence of liquor. I know of nothing wrong about him, and believe him to be a gentleman in every respect. And also that I have several wives scattered around through the country, have not drawn a sober breath since I have been here, never have paid for the clothes I wear, and am in fact since I was a child."

FIRST CLASS TRADE.

DECLINE OF THE SALMON FISHERIES ON THE SACRAMENTO.
 The salmon run in the Sacramento river has decreased until it has proved disastrous to canneries and fishermen. It promises to become extinct. In this dilemma the fishermen threaten to violate the close season, and defy the law. The cause of the decay of the fisheries is attributed, first to the sea lions at the Golden Gate. It is said they destroy 5,300 pounds of fish daily. It is alleged that the throwing of trimmings into the river by the cannery employes is another cause of the slackening of the run, it being held that the fish avoid waters into which parts of the bodies of dissected fish are cast. This may be a fanciful, or it may be a cogent, reason; certainly fishermen have faith in it. One admitted prime cause is the surcharging of the waters of the river with mining detritus and the coating of the bed of the stream with hydraulic sands and silex. These evils destroy the feeding grounds and obliterate spawning beds. That the fouling of the water by mining process tends to repel the fish is certain, while overflows, owing to the raised river bed certainly carry many young fish into basins, where the falling of the waters leaves them to perish. The catfish is said to be destructive of the young fry salmou, and to all the other fish, the discontinuance of the McCloud fish hatching establishments, heretofore maintained by the United States government. In contrast to the depletion of our fisheries, is the overcropping of northern streams by salmon. The runs were never so great there as now. It is held by some that the salmon will return next season to the Sacramento, but fishermen generally are not consoled by this possibility. It is certain that the legislature must give this matter of the supply of food fish greater attention than has been accorded by its predecessors. The fish commissioners, in the first place, must be given ample means and full power to carry out their work of protecting the fishery interests, even to the destruction of the seals and catfish. In the next place, the funds for the maintenance of a sufficient river police force under the direction of the commissioners of our fisheries, is the overcropping of northern streams by salmon. BOILED DOWN.
 Jeff Davis is making speeches in Mississippi. The cholera is spreading rapidly in northeastern France. Kansas Democrats want the state prohibition laws repealed. T. A. Hendricks has sent a silver cap to a baby named after him. The N. Y. Sun champions Butler and says the religious press is against Cleveland.

A. S. Warren, president of the Albion, N. Y., bank, has skipped to Canada with the funds. French and Chinese ministers have received their passports and the next thing is war. San Francisco men think that the completion of the O. & C. railroad may restore lost Oregon trade.

The Michigan Democrats and Greenbackers have fused and claim they can carry the state in November. Typhoid fever is decimating the army of the Egyptian false prophet. The natives of Zambur, South Africa have revolted and murdered the entire Portuguese force.
